Overseas moves aren't foreign to us.

At Despatch Moving & Storage, we're as experienced at moving you across the Atlantic or across the Island. (In fact, we recently won a Customer Quality Achievement Award from Atlas Van Lines.)

We know the language. The tariffs. The legalities. The subtle nuances of overseas moves. We have to. Because not only do we move complete households, we move decorators, interior designers and international art collectors. You'll find that we're as sensitive to your possessions as we are to your specific needs.

If you're considering an overseas move, consider Despatch. In fact, the thought of using someone else is foreign to us.

Au revoir.

1(888) 414 - DOWN

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

"We go the distance for you."

Site Where Major Andre, The British Spy, Was Tied To A Post And Whipped

By Dan Rattiner

People who come out to the Eastern End of Long Island for the first time can see for themselves that the area is made up of beautiful old villages that clearly date from the colonial era. They bear a startling resemblance not to other villages on Long Island, but to the old New England villages of Connecticut and Massachusetts that we associate with the founding of the country, the Battle of Bunker Hill, the Boston Tea Party, Paul Revere and the patriotic defeat of the British tyrants.

In all respects, except one, the above is true. Southold, Southampton, Westhampton Beach, Bridgehampton, Sag Harbor and East Hampton were founded and built when the rest of Long Island was a great, vast unoccupied open space. The villages thrived in the colonial era. In fact, for a time, they were even under the jurisdiction of Connecticut. What is not true, however, is that the East End towns fought to throw out the British.

Unlike the colonial villages further north, the Hamptons and North Fork communities quickly came under the occupation of the British, who landed in Sag Harbor, defeated George Washington at the Battle of Long Island and sent him packing to Valley Forge, Pennsylvania. The victorious British forced every man, woman and child on Long Island to sign a pledge of loyalty to the King. Those that objected were rounded up and flogged. Those that objected and were able to Sagaponack Road that seemed very strange to me. It is pictured above. It reads "On This Site Stood the Spider-Legged Mill where During The Revolutionary War, Major Andre, the British spy, was Tied to a Post and Whipped." From the first time I saw it, I thought there was something very off-key about it. No date marks the event. Major Andre was captured and hanged in Tappan, New York, upstate, later in the war. It would seem most unusual that he would be brought out here to be whipped beforehand. Keep in mind that the known whipping in these parts back then was BY the British, not OF the British. Something was wrong.

Although I did nothing about it — the sign bears a silhouette of a map of the State of New York so I figured they must know something I don't — the appearance of this sign sparked the interest of Earl Gandel, a long time Bridgehampton resident who also knows the history. He decided to look into the matter.

What he has unearthed clears up much of the mystery, and suggests either some sort of bureaucratic foul-up or a failure to get history accurately. At the present time, members of the Bridgehampton Historical Society, alerted by Gandel's findings, are pushing to right what is apparently a wrong. You can't go around putting up big, metal, historic markers that are completely wrong, no matter how interesting they might be, even if you are the officials of the State of New York.

East Hampton's Renee Zellweger and White Stripes' Jack White were reunited in Detroit after the versatile actress completed her work in London for Bridget Jones: The Edge of Reason, on Valentine's Day. Then it was off to Hollywood for the 76th Academy Awards where Ms. Zellweger won her first Oscar last Sunday for Best Actress in a Supporting Role. It took a lot of work to make the performer look the part in Cold Mountain. She had to get up early to have exposed body parts painted with dirty colored makeup and wear a mousy, messy wig. But, as with Charlize Theron in Monster, the dressing down led to the award.

The present sign was put up five years ago under the direction of a Southampton Town Councilman, Steve Halsey, who had been given the task of reviewing all the historic markers in the town, gathering up historic markers that had been knocked over by snowplows, found by local residents or otherwise turned in to the Highway Department, researching and determining where the historic markers ought to go, and either remounting or replacing those that were out of order. It was quite a task.

Official Historic Markers in the East End hamlets were not put up by the various towns and villages, but by the State of New York Department of Education about seventy years ago.

At the time, which was in the 1930s, this country was in the throes of the Great Depression. Huge numbers of people were out of work. In an attempt to jump start the economy, the various state governments, at the behest of President Roosevelt, created Make-Work projects to get the unemployed off the streets, busy doing something useful in some way or another. One of these projects, put together by the State of New York, was to survey historic areas and put up historic markers. Over three years, more than 2,800 were put up in this state. All of them were created at a casting foundry in Bloomville, New York, Catskill Casting, that is still in business today.

There is reference to a historic marker that was put up back then at the corner of Sagg Main St. and Sagaponack Road, then called the Old Post Road, but there are no records in the Education Department to indicate exactly what it said. What is clear is that that metal historic marker got knocked down, and like many others, lost. When Councilman Halsey went to do his inventory, he determined from longtime residents that there was a sign on this corner, and, looking into it further, found a local resident, who had what he said was a picture of that old sign. That was the basis for the wording of the sign that got put up five years ago.

However, it turns out that the actual wording of the 1930s sign IS on file in the New York State Department of Education. And it is not what has been put up.

Earl Gandel had a considerable correspondence with George Hamell, the Director of the State Historical Marker Program at the Department of Education in Albany. Hamell found correspondence from the 1950s, written at a time when the State was doing the same sort of project that the Town of Southampton did in the late 1990s. They would restore not 70 or 80 signs, which is the number in the Town of Southampton. They would attempt to restore all the 2,800 signs in the entire State of New York. And over a period of several years, they did so. After that, the Department of Education went out of the historic marker business. The funding was no longer available. And so the taking care of its historic markers has become a job for the individual towns.

Anyway, in the correspondence, Hamell found a letter written in the 1950s that referred to the sign that had originally been put up in Sagaponack in the 1930s. It noted the exact wording of that sign. The sign read:

Site of Spider-Legged Mill to Which Major Cochrane Tied William Russel During the Revolution and Ordered Him Whipped.

That would be Major Cochrane of the British Army, the whipper, and William Russel (sic) of an old East End family, the whippie. Correct.

At this point, Hamell has gone as far as he can. The sign is wrong, and there is no funding to fix it. But the Town can probably fix it. The expense is not great. Hamell, in his final letter to Gandel, actually spelled out the costs of replacing the sign. The Catskill Foundry would charge $595 for a new marker, $20 for shipping, $45 for a new mounting pole and $20 for shipping that.

"If you can reuse the present pole or post," Hamell wrote, "you could save a little money."

Which leaves only one question, which is — what went wrong? I have a theory.

Early on in this story, I noted that the State of New York, as a Make-Work project, had put up historic markers everywhere. Hamell found there were three put up in Bridgehampton. One, which is still on Main Street, notes that John Wick's Inn was located on the site during the Colonial era. A second, on Windmill Hill, notes that it was the site of Wick's Spider Leg Mill, and then there is the third, which is the one in question.

There were many windmills built on the eastern end of Long Island back then. Eleven remain

A Personal Encounter

Down, Out And Begging, In One Of The Wealthiest Enclaves In America

By Dan Rattiner

I have not been able to get the following personal encounter out of my mind. I have to write about it.

It was 8:30 on a dark night, a bitter cold night in early February, and I was coming out of the brightly lit Kmart store in the Bridgehampton Mall. I was pushing a shopping cart loaded to the brim with purchases — Martha Stewart towels and pillows, a microwave, curtain rods and curtains, a heating blanket and some picture frames to my car in the parking lot — when a small, shabbily dressed black man appeared from between some cars.

"Please, please help," he said. He stood about three feet away from me shivering from the wind. He had stopped. I stopped.

"Do you just have a dollar? Please. It would help so much."

The following thoughts passed through my mind. I thought of all this money I had just spent, more than $200. I thought, surely I can spare a dollar. I thought of prosperity, and the joy of the season that just ended. And I thought, am I in danger? Does this man have a knife? How far is my car? I thought this must be what people usually think about when they are approached this way. And I thought about being ashamed of my nice clothes, of my scarf and gloves, and how hopeless this man was.

"Just anything," he said.

I avoided eye contact, but I went with my instincts. They said this was real. I reached into my pocket and took out my wallet, with all the twenties from the ATM in it on one side, and the singles, fives and tens in it on the other. I fingered a dollar. Changed my mind. Gave him five dollars.

He looked at it. "Oh!" he shouted. Tears had come to his eyes. "Oh! Thank you so, SO much."

And he came at me and embraced me, pressing himself against me, his arms wrapping around my waist in a hug. It took me completely by surprise. At first I didn't know what to do. And then, everything still telling me what he was doing was truly heartfelt, I hugged him back. And so we stood there like that, with shopping carts rattling by this way and that on a very cold February evening, and we rocked back and forth there in the parking lot. Tears had come

Five dollars was not near enough to put anything of substance on him. There he was now, by the bricks in front of the Kmart, and he was still looking down at the bill. I wanted to give him more. A ten. But then I hesitated. And he was gone.

The thought flashed through me, as I began again toward my parked SUV, that perhaps my pocket had been picked. I felt angry with myself for even thinking that. My wallet, with all the money in it, was still in my hand. But I checked my pockets. And I did a generalized accounting of what was in my wallet. All was still there. What had passed between us, in those few seconds, had stunned me to the core. Life was so unfair. And I started crying again.

But then, I was at the car, and the crying stopped. I loaded all my things in the back, and as I backed out and headed through the parking lot past the rows and rows of glittering vehicles, I looked for him, hoping I would see him again. I would have stopped, I think. Given him more. But how much could I do?

How much could one man do?

I thought, driving toward the traffic light at the entrance to the mall, maybe he had got into a store to keep warm. And he was pretending to shop. And the store managers were letting him. In any case, I didn't see him anymore. He was still gone.

And then, so was I. But I am not the same. Sometimes, I think I have fully sorted all this out in my mind. Made peace with it. But then the memory of the encounter returns, and with it, anger and frustration and confusion, and tears well up in my eyes, and I realize I have not. • to my eyes too.

He released me after awhile, and he stepped back. Behind him the glare from the lights of the Rite Aide Pharmacy prevented my getting a good look at him.

Then he said this: "I am so COLD!"

It was a cry into the wind. To nobody in particular. But then he looked at the five dollar bill and sobbed, a joyful sob it was, and started away.

"Buy something to put on you!" I said after him. And then I started to cry.

standing, though not Wick's. There were other windmills built by the Dutch in upstate New York, none of which remain standing. A spider-leg mill was a kind of windmill design where the legs of the mill remain exposed and where other legs are attached buttress fashion. None of those remain.

If I were to hazard a guess, I would bet that there was a marker in upstate New York which read "On This Site Stood the Spider-legged Mill Where Major Andre, the British Spy, was tied to a post and whipped." Probably in Tappan.

How could it have gotten here, sometime between 1930 and 1960, to be photographed by someone who gave a print to Don Sacher who gave it to Councilman Halsey?

Let me tell you a story.

One snowy night, years ago, as a freshman at the University of Rochester in Rochester, New York, I went out with four other freshmen to River Road, the curving street that ran along the banks of the Genessee River and defined the border of the campus. We left the dorm at about two in the morning. And we had a plan. At one particular spot along River Road there was a very sharp curve, and to warn motorists about it, the State had erected a huge, yellow diamond-shaped sign with a black curved arrow on it. We were going to steal it.

It was a bitterly cold night, but we dressed for the occasion. We also brought with us hammers, pliers and screwdrivers to accomplish the task, and we arrayed ourselves along River Road as follows: three of the freshmen would deal with the sign. One freshman, me, would walk about two hundred yards down the road to the north and serve as a lookout for approaching cars. Another freshman would walk about two hundred yards down the road to the south and serve as a lookout for approaching cars. We lookouts could see the kids working the sign and also see the cars coming from the other way, but we stood at a place where the motorists could not yet see the kids at the sign. When a car approached, at the top of our lungs, we were to yell "PROBLEM!" The kids at the sign would run into the bushes.

Over the course of the next twenty minutes, I yelled PROBLEM maybe fifteen times. Each time, the three boys at the sign scurried off to their hiding place. The car passed.

But then, at the twenty-minute mark, the sign came free fell to the snow with a great bang, and the boys let out a great whoop. Both of us lookouts ran to the sign to help carry it, and between the five of us, we quickly made it across the quad to our dorm where we discovered what we should have known all along, which was that the sign was far too large to fit through any door. And so we left it leaning up against the dorm, and went inside to bed.

Early the next morning, the sign was still there, but there was news around the campus that the police had gone down to where the sign had been, because, in the snow, a car had spun out and gone off the road. Nobody had been injured. But the police were there and looking, so far unsuccessfully, for their sign.

An anonymous call was made. By noon, the authorities had removed the sign from where it was still leaning against the brick wall of the dorm, and had returned it to its rightful place on its posts. The police, who had been directing traffic since early that morning, retreated. They were looking, it was said, for some kids who wore a certain kind of boot that left a certain kind of tread. I threw mine out inside a garbage bag in a dumpster behind the cafeteria.

Make of this what you will. But I can tell you the statute of limitations has expired. They can't get me now.

My guess is the Andre the Spy sign got down to Bridgehampton by teenager sometime in the 1950s. Somebody took its picture. Then it was down again.

Craig Mowry at work

Reality TV

Southampton Man Files Lawsuit Alleging He Wrote The Plot Of The Truman Show

By Dan Rattiner

How many people have written a play or a movie or a TV show that they think could bring them fame and fortune? A million? Five million. Most people just jot the idea down and show it to their friends, or, if encouraged, write a complete script, or get an agent and send it off, or they try to sell the idea themselves. Most of the time, nothing comes of it.

In the early 1980s, Craig Mowry of Southampton wrote a movie script called Crew. He was attending Northwestern University when he wrote it, and after graduation he tinkered with it and modified it and, getting legal advice, mailed off a copy to himself registered mail, and then sent it out to be copyrighted. This was in 1986. After that, he sent it off to filmmakers in Hollywood. He got encouragement about the screenplay, and a suggestion that he try again. There was an exchange of letters with various film studio executives. But in the end, he got no offers. And so he abandoned the project and went to work as a marketing executive for a large advertising firm. He had to put food on the table.

Not that any of this would be important except for what happened later, but for the record, Mowry says he got the idea for Crew when he was about fifteen years old. His parents had bought him a used Bolex movie camera and a tripod. He had made numerous homemade movies. But when the Bolex was not in use it stood on its tripod in his bedroom at night, and Mowry went to sleep looking at it. What if, he thought, some famous moviemaker was secretly filming him when he slept? What if he was being filmed all the time, 24 hours a day? He imagined that from the moment he was born, a filmmaker such as him who was being filmed, but someone else.

Mowry never saw the movie The Truman Show when it came out in 1998. But he did see the Academy Awards in early 1999 for the films made in 1998. Andrew M. Niccol, the screenwriter, received a nomination for his imaginative screenplay. In the box office, The Truman Show grossed over $100 million. It was a huge hit.

The next day, according to Mowry, numerous friends familiar with Crew called him up to congratulate him on the success of The Truman Show. They had no idea he had nothing to do with it.

"Great idea changing the name of it to The Truman Show," one of his friends told him.

And so he went out to a nearby theatre to see it in its entirety, sitting himself in an aisle seat in the event that, during it, he might have to run to the Men's Room to throw up.

Mowry called a copyright lawyer. He received a thousand calls a year, the lawyer told Mowry. A person writes a play about a divorcee being murdered in a health club. They see a film about a divorcee being murdered in a health club. They want to sue for copyright infringement. Happens all the time. What you have to prove, the lawyer said,

"Great idea changing the name of it to The Truman Show," one of his friends told him.

Fellini had arranged for his life to be filmed and be presented, every day, as an ongoing series on television. People all over the world could be watching him grow up, go off to college, get married, live his life.

And so, that is the plotline he made into the screenplay Crew, although in what he thought would be the commercial version, it was not

is that whoever made the movie had direct access to your screenplay, liked it, read it, and stole it. And that is very hard to do. You wrote it in the 80s. The film came out in the 90s. You also have to prove a financial loss because of the theft. Damages. That can be very difficult too.

The lawyer also told him that, from what Mowry told him about the similarity with his piece, it did seem that he'd had a very original idea. It wasn't just another divorcee in a health club sort of thing. Nevertheless, studios have teams of lawyers who deal with this sort of thing. It is very hard to win anything. Of course if he wanted to hire him and pay him by the hour, that was another matter. His fee was — he named a high number — per hour.

As a result of this conversation, Mowry put the idea of suing Niccol aside.

Sometime last year, however, Mowry was surfing the Internet when he came upon something that completely changed things. What he came upon, he says, is an early script for The Truman Show, produced by Niccol in 1991, that bore an even more startling resemblance to Crew than the final movie did. This was only five years after Mowry had been sending out his screenplay to filmmakers. He also saw, he says, the elusive direct connection.

Convinced again that something ought to be done, he got the names of several different "rights" lawyers, and has found one of them, Allen A. Heller of Heller, Horowitz and Felt in Manhattan, who has taken the case on a contingency basis. If nothing comes of this, he doesn't get paid.

"We think that we can prove that The Truman Show was knowing and deliberately stolen from Mr. Mowry's screenplay," Heller told a reporter for the New York Times last Monday. He said that the direct connection, which he believed Mr. Mowry had found linking the defendants to the script of Crew, would be presented at trial.

Mowry is suing Mr. Niccol, Viacom, Scott Rudin Productions and Paramount Pictures for $60 million in United States District Court in Manhattan. Depositions of Mr. Niccol and Mr. Mowry are being taken in the next few weeks.

Niccol wrote several more films after The Truman Show, including one entitled Simone that you might know. He continues working today writing film scripts, though he has not won any further awards.

As for Craig Mowry, he has returned to the filmmaking business as well. In 1999, he made a full-length documentary called Bellport that premiered at Lincoln Center's Walter Reade Theatre. It is the record of Bellport(LI) High School juniors and seniors making a movie for a class assignment. Currently, Mowry is working on a new documentary, called Other People's Kids that he hopes to complete within the next twelve months.

A white male with a goatee, approximately 35 years old, between five foot seven and five ten and weighing about 200 pounds went into an HSBC Bank in Centereach the other day and shoved a note across to a teller. It read ROBBERY. It took them awhile to get that straight, but after they did he made off with between $5000 and $10000 in cash. Police have dubbed him the "Spellign Bee Dropout Robber" and are offering $2000 for any information that will lead to his arrest and conviction.

In Florida, as you may recall, a man put himself in a box and had Fed Ex pick him up just outside his front door and mail him overnight to his mother in Galveston, Texas. He braved the cold in the cargo area of the Fed Ex airplane, and saved quite a bit of money since an airline ticket was far more expensive than the Fed Ex fee, but his mother was not amused.

In Medellin, Colombia, there has been a similar incident, but with a twist. A man bent on burglarizing a wealthy home in an upscale neighborhood, pasted a sticker on the front of a big box that read PARA: GLORIA PELAEZ, climbed inside the box with a ski mask, a gun and a rope, had an accomplice throw in Styrofoam on top of him and seal the box, put it in the back of a station wagon, and drop it off at the front door of the residence. The station wagon then roared off.

First offenders receiving short prison sentences in Spain are routinely allowed to serve it as parole.

Neighbors saw the box being dropped off, however, and when the maid came to the front gate to take it in, they told her this might be a bomb and to stop what she was doing and call the police. The police came, brought with them a bomb squad and a police dog, and opened the package.

Another burglary gone wrong.

The commercial you never got to see on Super Bowl Sunday starts out with a pizza boy delivering a pie with "extra sausage." Two beautiful babes who have greeted him at the front door drag him down behind a sofa. A lot of clothes fly around, all from the delivery boy. Then one of the honeys says "What happened to the extra sausage?" After that a message appears on the screen which says EATING MEAT CAN MAKE YOU IMPOTENT.

The non-profit organization PETA (People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals) attempted to purchase the time on CBS during the Super Bowl. CBS declined the ad, stating that it was too controversial and made a claim that has not been proven.

Woof.

Tom Scott, of Plum TV

The Tom & Frazer Show

Juice Guy Starting Plum TV At Frazer Dougherty's LTV In Wainscott

By John Capone

To Tom Scott (you might know him as one of the "Tom and Toms" of Nantucket Nectars — the company he co-founded with little more than a blender and the notion that he could make better juice), the word plum means many things. In addition to referring to the ordinary fruit, there's the local connotation of "beach plum" and, of course, it can also mean good. Nantucket Nectars never made a plum flavored drink, but Tom Scott has an ambitious new plan for local television on the East End, called Plum TV.

Although he is no longer a "juice guy," Tom Scott has distilled much of the spirit he used to be successful there to start the new twenty-four hour cable station. For the name, he borrowed the distinctive purple of his juice bottle labels. "Plum is the color of life," he says. It's close to the color that blood turns when the blue blood returning to the heart mixes with re-oxygenated, red blood pumping away from it. Which is fitting, because Plum TV wants to reach the heart of the community.

The pump for Plum TV will be East Hampton Studios, Frazer Dougherty's film and television production facility in Wainscott, while Cablevision will provide the veins and arteries in a leased access agreement. In there somewhere will be the people, places and politics of founded LTV with a similar commitment to the area, has been energized by the new endeavor, and both he and Tom look forward to East Hampton Studios becoming a vital creative center, with Plum TV being produced in the same building as LTV, and filmmakers and others using the well-equipped space at various times.

...he has already lined up an eclectic conglomeration ranging from a dance troop to a stunt training company...

Frazer, 81, chuckles at the fact that his age is often prefixed by the word "youthful," but when he animatedly starts talking about the new project, "spry" just won't cut it. He says that this summer he has already lined up an eclectic conglomeration ranging from a dance troop to a stunt training company that will practice falling off roofs. He sees this unique mix providing a constant flow of material for Plum TV.

the East End — everything that colors the community from Westhampton to Montauk.

The deal with Cablevision has yet to be finalized, but Plum TV is planning to bring high-quality, local programming to the Hamptons and Montauk starting this May. Frazer, who

Tom Scott has a similar cable television venture in Nantucket called NTV, which will serve as a model for Plum TV. He spent most of his adult life in Nantucket and seems to have a real feel for the exigencies of seasonal communities. The similarities between the two communities was one of the things that attracted Tom to move here this fall with his wife Emily, one of the founders of the J. Crew clothing catalogue, and the daughter of J. Crew founder Arthur Cinader. They had just had a child and they came out to the Hamptons during a search for a new home. Tom found that in talking with people from the area he continually heard issues and themes that were very familiar to him from his life on Nantucket.

Think of why you first came to the East End, or why you stay here. One of the goals of Plum TV is to remind you. "People love these places. The people who live here love this place," Tom says. "They love it and they talk about how beautiful is and how lucky they are. And the people who come in the summer; they love it; they think it's beautiful; they say how lucky they are." He has a theory — some might call it blind optimism; he calls it a theory — that ninety percent of the people in the world really do like each other. All that's stopping them from getting along is that they don't get to communicate. Both Tom and Frazer see part of the mission of Plum TV as improving relations between part-time and year-round residents. Frazer calls it a chance for "second-home-owners to learn about the community."

Tom hopes Plum TV will reflect all the quirks and beauty that are unique to this area. "We're going to start as best we can," he says, "And I know that what we start off being isn't what we'll end up being, but we'll just try to get better every day." The station will be professional, twenty-four-hours-a-day-seven-days-a-week with no commercial interruptions ("partners" will sponsor blocks of time), and will be driven by the events and nature of the community. Tom has been involved with NTV for seven years and has run it for the last three, so he is bringing experience and a staff that has done this before. Still, he describes this process as an evolution.

Tom is not a television person, and in the guerrilla world of local television, that is most likely a good thing. "I wasn't a juice person by way of background either. We literally just said 'I wish it had more of this and less of that,'" he explains. "We were just naïve enough to try. I have no doubt that's the reason it worked for us." His argument goes like this: if you don't know the rules, you don't know when you're breaking them and you're much more likely to do something different and better. Think of it as innovation by accident. And it has a long and celebrated history.

Tom told me that doing it yourself means you and your wife getting in bed one night and flipping on the TV to check on the new cable television station in Nantucket you just bought and, to your horror, the station flickers and goes blank right before your eyes. This is indeed what happened. Tom recalls, "And the guy who knew how to run everything had gone away for the weekend to a wedding. We jumped out of bed and went downtown. We got on our hands and knees in the studio, not knowing how any of the stuff worked. But we just had to figure out how to get it back on air."

One of the catches of television is that you're always being watched (you hope). "If you want people to watch, you're going to do your embarrassing things very publicly, but if you're not willing to look stupid, you may never succeed." Tom concedes that the new station will probably make some mistakes. When he ran Nantucket Nectars, Tom says, he always used to tell everyone at company meetings, "The strongest thing you can do is fail." •

Renee Zellweger Actress

By John Capone
FADE IN: INT. EAST HAMPTON HOME OF RENEE ZELLWEGER – EVE

Piano jazz plays softly in the background RENEE ZELLWEGER in a black cocktail dress and slippers is holding a glass of champagne in one hand and dusting her mantle with the other. She puts the flute on the mantle and moves a clock to make room on the mantle. The phone rings, a pleasant chirp, twice before RENEE picks up.

RENEE

Hello? Oh, Steven, Hiiii. Thank you. Yes, It is exciting. Newtown Lane? Now? Sure why not? I don't know, are you bringing yours? Of course. We'll see whose is heavier.

Hangs up.

RENEE picks up a large handbag, pads over to the counter where we see the glittering Oscar statuette she won on Sunday night, which she picks up and drops into the handbag before running out the door.

* * *

Love and a .45 should have Renee Zellweger catapulted onto Hollywood's A-list. But it didn't. The fact that you're still scratching your head asking, "Love and a what?" goes to show why. Her star turn as Starlene Cheatham didn't go completely unrecognized, though. She received an Independent Spirit Award nomination for Best Debut Actress for her role in the 1994 shoot-em-up. She next appeared in Texas Chainsaw Massacre: The Next Generation where she was actually credited as

The Whole Wide World, and won acclaim at the Sundance Film Festival. She has been widely quoted as having said, "Being horrible in a big film is a quicker nosedive than doing an obscure film and making no money." She continued to gain positive notices for her part opposite Tom Cruise in Jerry Maguire, the role she first came to the public-at-large's attention for, in 1996. She is rumored to have beaten out such box-office draws as Winona Ryder, Bridget Fonda, Mira Sorvino and Marisa Tomei for the part.

After Jerry Maguire, Zellweger's star began to rise quickly. She played the title role in Nurse Betty, for which she received a Golden Globe for Best Actress in 2000 and her first Academy Award nomination. Also in 2000, she starred in the Farrelly Brothers's Me, Myself and Irene with Jim Carrey, whom she dated for a short while after. In 2001, Zellweger played the iconic Bridget Jones, in the adaptation of Helen

"Being horrible in a big film is a quicker nosedive than doing an obscure film and making no money."

Renee Zellweger opposite the bongo-playing Matthew McConaughey. She was 19.

Since then, this East Hampton resident appeared in My Boyfriend's Back, Reality Bites, Dazed and Confused and Empire Records. She played the Prescott Motel Buckle Bunny in the rodeo flick 8 Seconds. In 1996 she appeared in Fielding's Bridget Jones's Diary. For Nurse Betty and Bridget Jones, the normally petite Zellweger put on the pounds and gained nearly as much attention as weight for being able to transform her body from film to film. After she gained weight for the upcoming Bridget

Jones sequel, Weight Watchers famously offered her $3.2 million to take the weight off using their program. An offer she wisely turned down.

Zellweger's biggest breakthrough was in 2002 with her enormous success in Chicago. She sang and danced her way to a second Best Actress Golden Globe for the role of Roxie Hart. That year she was nominated for an Oscar for the second time, but still didn't take home the statuette.

You didn't even have to stay awake very long during the 76th Oscar endurance test this year to see Ms. Zellweger's win of an Oscar for Best Supporting Actress for her role in Cold Mountain. It was almost a given; she had already won the Screen Actor's Guild Award. Zellweger now boasts a crowded mantle.

Astoundingly, her work in Down With Love was overlooked by the Academy and almost everyone else this year. Even the Hollywood Foreign Press failed to recognize her hairstyle versatility, ability to wear gigantic collars, and hat wearing aptitude. The only award I've seen the film receive this year was a City Paper Film Award for Best Ensemble Hair. And Renee will have to share that award with Tony Randall and Ewan McGregor.

Born to immigrant parents (her father was Swiss and her mother Norweigan) on April 25, 1965 in a small town just outside Houston, Texas, Zellweger refused to change her name when agents and others encouraged her to switch to something more marketable, because, as a first-generation-American, she wanted to honor her family name. She stayed in Texas for college, attending the University of Texas at Austin, where she majored in English. She only took a drama class to fulfill a requirement for graduation, but after the class she knew that she wanted to become an actress. With her versatility and grace, she has become one of the preeminent actresses of her generation.

Zellweger became an East Hampton resident last spring when she purchased a home, described as a relatively modest, 1800s farmhouse in the village near Maidstone. Her neighbor's have objected to her planting a line of tall evergreens to block the side of the house from the road. Perhaps they would prefer she just make an obscuring pile of awards. Zellweger is currently being seen around town (not East Hampton, but the proverbial town) with the White Stripes' Jack White. While his "love doesn't make a sound," it sure does make a ton of paparazzi photos. •

Chris Barrett previewed his show, I Gotta Make my Own Music, at the Maidstone Arms in East Hampton last summer and he will encore at Danny's Starlight Room in Manhattan in March.

Steve Haweeli at Wordhampton has organized another Hamptons Restaurant Week. 2003's Restaurant Week saw a 50% increase in the enjoyment of superb East End cuisine. BREAKING NEWS

Suffolk County police are searching for a Mastic woman who has been missing since Friday, when she failed to pick up her four-year-old son from a Riverhead day care center. When she didn't arrive, the Pine Tree Day Nursery called the boy's father, Patrick Moore, who picked him up. The woman, Vinessa Hoera, 23, was reported missing at 5 a.m. Saturday morning by her family when she still had not been heard from. Shortly after, her 1996 Toyota Camara was found on fire in Hampton Bays, but there was no sign of Hoera. At 7 a.m. that morning, police found Faustino Chavez, 26, on fire in his burning car in Ronkonkoma. Chavez works with Hoera at Cor-J Seafood in Westhampton, and reportedly gave her gold and diamond earrings this Christmas when he was her "Secret Santa." Chavez is currently in the burn unit at Stony Brook Medical Center. Police are conducting an arson investigation along with the missing person's case.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #288 When Irish Eyes Are Smiling...

On March 12th and 13th, Shelter Island is having its third annual Bella Notte Dinner Theatre night at St. Mary's Church (call Jody Thompson 749-2352 for tickets.) This island is full of talent and if this event is half as good as the first two, it will be a great time for everyone. This year, the event is called "Look to the Rainbow, An Evening of Irish Enchantment," directed by Margaret O'Wilson (all non Irish cast names have been amended to conform with the program.) They would have had it on March 17th, St. Patrick's Day, but for the Irish-American cast, that would be like making them work on Christmas. I'm already decorating for St. Patrick's Day and stocking up for the day the beer will flow like wine.

David O'Sher, the island's resident professionally trained opera singer, will perform "Danny Boy," which alone will be worth the price of admission. I love David Sher for the night in his Pizza Parlor when we spent an hour talking about opera, a passion we share, and he introduced me to the voice of Franco Corelli. Mel McMendolsohn, affectionately known as "MelMac," a nut you may recall from The Music Man, will be singing along with some other nuts, old and new; Paul McMobias, Jack Monaghan and David O'Flynn.

David O'Flynn (The Music Man) and Jennifer "Hurricane" McCorwin will re-enact a scene from The Quiet Man. It could be the scene where he drags her across the ground by the collar of her jacket, it could be the kissing scene in the graveyard, it could be the scene where they break the bed — they are keeping it secret. It is not known at this time whether or not Ms. McCorwin is planning a costume reveal, but you can place your bet at the Pharmacy.

Three barrels of Irish whiskey will be on hand in case the audience doesn't applaud loud enough or thinks the singers aren't good enough after the first act. In that event, the audience will all get a few shots, after which, the singers will sound a lot better, including the ones on stage.

Chef Marcelle O'Tattoni, from the island's Old Country Inn, will be preparing the dinner, so you know it will be excellent.

I learned from an inside source that there were a few other activities suggested for this evening. Some were voted down, some are still being considered:

There will not be a singing and drinking tour of the island following the show.

Both ferries are adding Ferry Marshalls to all boats on the night of the performance, so the idea of the cast to commandeer all the north and south ferries and switch them to confuse people, will not go off as planned.

The Midnight Naked Water Skiing Behind the Ferries after the show event, will also be precluded by the Ferry Marshalls who have orders to photograph any skiers. Any photos will be posted on the internet at www.what-was-i-thinking?.com.

The Deer Riding Contest was nixed because the Deer Union Rep wanted the island deer to have ferry access to visit off island deer for mating season. The island deer have been jamming for this for years, but the islanders have decided it would start a bad trend. Next, the deer would want ferry access during hunting season, and that's just inhuman.

The Catch a Raccoon and Make It Sit On Your Head Like a Hat Contest is still being considered. The judges will allow all contestants to take a bottle of Bushnell's and an IGA bag (which all raccoons recognize) filled with food scraps into the woods with them. The idea is to woo the raccoons with food scraps and get them drunk so they'll sit on your head for the judges. Or you can woo the judges and get them drunk and stick an old raccoon hat on your head and shake the tail so they'll think it's alive. The contest rules are really open to interpretation.

Standing outside the Police Station and singing for them after the show has been graciously declined by the police, although they are still offering those nice free breathalyzers tests for any reveler who might like one.

The Find a Four Leaf Clover in the Moonlight Contest is still on, but the judges warn the contestants not to do anything else in the clover and startle people who are driving by, causing them to hit their brakes and throw the car in reverse to get a better look.

It promises to be a fun night all around, so put on something green and go ring the bella's of St. Mary's!

In Barcelona, Spain, three years ago, a book entitled Women in Islam was published. Authored by an Egyptian-born imam named Mohamed Kamal Mustafa, it contains a chapter called "disciplining a rebellious woman." In it, husbands are advised to first use "serene dialogue," and if that doesn't work refuse to sleep in the same bed with her. If that doesn't work, the advice is to strike her "in a symbolic way" and "without excess."

"If one needs to use blows," one passage reads, "they should be administered to specific parts of the body like the feet and hands, using a light and thin stick so it will not leave scars or bruising on the body."

Two weeks ago, Mustafa was sentenced by a Spanish court to fifteen months in prison.

In court, Mustafa's attorneys offered a defense that included a claim that he is opposed to violence against women and was only writing his interpretation of Islamic law according to the Koran, the Muslim holy book.

The judge, in his decision, noted that today's society is not the Arabian Desert of 14 centuries ago.

In any case, it is very unlikely that Mustafa will have to do any jail time. First offenders receiving short prison sentences in Spain are routinely allowed to serve it as parole.

John Cummings, 53, of Manchester, New Hampshire, was issued a summons for drunk-driving. It was his second offense. In court, two weeks later, he was given a tongue lashing by the judge, who then ruled that Cummings should have his license suspended. Cummings' lawyer said they would appeal the decision, and asked the judge if Cummings could keep his license until the appeals court met. The judge said no. So Cummings handed his license in to the judge.

With the court action at an end, John Cummings drove home. Or he tried to. When he got three blocks from the courthouse, a police officer, alerted to the problem, pulled him off the road and arrested him again, this time charging him with driving without a license.

William Gaddis, the writer who passed away in 1999, is a well known 20th century novelist whose work is sometimes compared in scope to that of Melville and in complexity to the work of James Joyce. He won numerous book awards, including the National Book Award, twice. He was also the recipient of the prestigious MacArthur Grant, given to "geniuses" who could make good use of a financial gift.

The first of Gaddis' novels is entitled "The Recognitions." It runs to almost 1000 pages and at his funeral, his family decided that a particular passage from that book ought to appear on his tombstone.

It reads: "And the sun, which had kept so close all the day, sought before leaving it to fill the sky with color, a soft luster of pink, and then purple against the pure blue color which refined the clouds to their own shapes and then, discovering in them for minutes the whole material of beauty, then leaving them without light to moke the sky, losing form, losing edges and shape and definition, until soon enough with darkness, they disappear entirely."

It would not be a small tombstone. Gaddis is buried in the Oakland Cemetery in Sag Harbor. His tombstone, carved by one of the Yardley brothers, was placed there several years later. Others buried nearby are George Balanchine, the choreographer and dancer, and photographer Hans Namuth. Like many other cemeteries in this community of greats and near-greats, visitors often make the rounds to see the burial plots of those they admire.

And so it was that Martin Filler, an architecture critic, and his wife Rosemarie Haag Bletter, an architectural historian, went over to the Oakland Cemetery from their summer home in Southampton last summer to visit some of the graves. They noticed that on the tombstone of William Gaddis, the name of his first book is misspelled. It is not "The Recongnitions."

The discovery has put the whole community in a dither. The Yardleys are very apologetic. But they note that Gaddis' daughter, Sarah Gaddis, approved of the template.

Gaddis was brilliant, complicated, and thorough. Something should be done about this as soon as possible.

There's a fifteen-year-old Canadian who has just settled a lawsuit filed against him by Microsoft. Microsoft complained that the defendant, Mike Rowe, uses a website that is too much like their name, microsoft.com, and is therefore, a violation of their rights. I think you know what name Mike Rowe chose for his website.

In the settlement, Microsoft.com made to get the name MikeRoweSoft.com off the Internet, the 15-year-old will get a whole slew of things. The original offer from Microsoft to settle the matter was that they would pay him a small token sum.

Mike Rowe said he would give it up for $10,000 or fight.

It did get ugly. Mike Rowe was accused of extortion and broke off negotiations for awhile. But finally, the matter was settled and Rowe will receive a new domain name for free, free programming classes, a free Xbox System and an all-expenses paid red carpet tour of the Microsoft campus outside of Seattle.

book review: moses returns

By Jerry Cimisi

The brutal narrative of Mel Gibson's The Passion of the Christ has brought people to a visceral confrontation with their own beliefs. On perhaps a more complex and intricate level is the recent novel, Moses Returns: The Last Revolution by Victor Sherman, a book exploring the devotion and mission of the man who brought to the world the tenets of the Judeo-Christian (and even Moslem) faith.

From a childhood among Egyptians, his travels throughout the Fertile Crescent, returning to his people and his duty to God, eventually Moses is "reborn" millennia later, witnessing 9/11 and the spiritual battles of the 21st century.

Not only is Moses given a rich personal life, but there is Jesus and Mohammed too, David and Solomon and cameo appearances by Einstein and Max Planck.

Sherman was born in Moscow in 1931. His family survived the purges of Stalin and the German assault of WWII. Sherman became an engineer, held patents, and authored an engineering textbook as well as a book on privatization, which took hold in the new Russia of the 1990s. Sherman left the Soviet Union in 1977. "I became an American with the first teaspoon of American condensed milk, and a dissident, too," he has joked.

The novel opens with 9/11 America. It returns to Moses being raised by Egyptians. Sherman had wondered: "The Bible says almost nothing about those years. How had his character and his wisdom been developed?"

In the Temple of Amun Moses learns of the accomplishments — and follies — of past civilizations. He falls in love with his adopted sister, the Princess Maketamon. (In this novel, Moses is quite a ladies' man.) He enters the military because the Pharaoh, his adopted grandfather, prohibits their marriage. Then he is a merchant, traveling throughout the known world. Finally he returns to Egypt and his enslaved people. The Voice of God leads him and them into not only a new land, but also a new perception of life.

The persona of Moses continues after Moses' earthly death. He is witness to the eras of David and Solomon and sees how slavery corrupts empires from inside. He sees the rise and fall of Israel, converses with Christ and Mohammed. These religious figures are invested with a personal as well as spiritual life, and their relationships with their peoples and their times.

Late in the 20th century, Moses is "reborn" in America as a young man named Matthew who one day realizes his "inheritance." On September 11, 2001, Matthew, as a young patent attorney, is walking toward his office in the World Trade Center. The terrorist attacks focus Matthew/Moses on his new mission from God: how to at once save and reform the Western culture that the Hebrews began. What lessons of history are we ignoring, putting the West in its present peril?

The book moves easily back and forth between vastly separated eras, as Matthew and his soon-to-be wife, Camilla (who is also the "reincarnation" of his Egyptian adopted sister) dodge, and ultimately defeat, terrorists sent to assassinate them. The goal of the timeless couple is to form the "New Era Commandments."

Sherman has commented, "I realized the common images of Moses, Jesus and Mohammed were very different than the ones I came to have. I believe Moses had a good knowledge of previous civilizations. The first five books of the Bible (attributed to Moses) show his knowledge was at a much higher level than the knowledge of others at the time. Especially on a social level. He was the first person in history, at least in written language, who expressed ideas about the power of the Spirit. All the founders of the world religions should be read as philosophers and as living persons."

The core of Moses' mission, in the past and present, is summarized in what Matthew says to Camilla after watching President Bush address the nation on 9/11.

"Today I realized people should understand God rationally."

"God doesn't fit our logic."

"Maybe because our minds are under the pressure of what we want Him to want? Regarding our freedom of will, God does not interfere with regular life — it is our trial. That is why his laws are expressed not firmly, like in physics, but as Commandments, which one can violate at will."

When asked how the themes of his book compare with Mel Gibson's movie, Sherman said, "In a way, they are opposite. It's not important if the movie is anti-Semitic, or not. But as a divisive work, it definitely is anti-Christian and even anti-American because only 'United We Stand' can bring us through our very serious problems. But I think that Mr. Gibson's movie has a bright side, too. It shows that for both Christians and Jews it's urgent now to begin bridging together their faiths, abandoning their traditions and details of religious procedures in favor of better understanding of God."

Victor Sherman says the theme of his book is: "All the factors that force people to kill each other must be eliminated. God acts all the time through us, but with rare exceptions he doesn't interfere. The job is ours."

At the end of Moses Returns: The Last Revolution, one of the New Era Commandments reads: "Strive to Understand Me and the World I Have Created."

Sherman's Moses seeks just that, and wrestles with the fact that comprehension of the divine means taking action in the human realm.

Saying Good-bye To Two Who Made A Difference

John Perry, a familiar name on the Long Island wine scene – first at Galluccio Vineyards in Cutchogue and later at Wölffer Estate in Sagaponack – has officially been appointed regional vice president for Amerikus, importer of fine Greek wines and spirits.

Amerikus' portfolio consists of over 65 wines from 15 highly acclaimed Greek producers. With over 300 indigenous cultivars/varietyals going back thousands of years, winemaking has very deep roots (pardon the pun) in Greece. Amerikus is represented by Charmer Industries and has earned national recognition thanks both to an established distribution channel in over 15 states, and wonderful reviews from the Wine Spectator.

"While numerous enticing offers arose over the past year, none I am happy to say could steal my heart from the exciting wine industry right here on Long Island. Until now. Between the truly exceptional quality of the wines, the strength of the Amerikus organization, and an eagerly awaited return to my cultural roots, the passion has been awakened, and I am thrilled to be a part of the mystifying experience of Greek wine," said John "Paraskevopoulos" Perry.

Best of luck to you, John. You'll be missed by many.

Under Jane Baxter Lynn's tenure as executive director of the Long Island Wine Council, the Wine Spectator's Long Island Wine Classic – kick-off party for the Hampton Classic Horse Show – was launched, the Council held its first-ever Long Island wine dinner at the renowned Four Seasons restaurant in Manhattan, and a group of very diverse people, our Long Island vintners, came together to pursue a common goal: the creation of a world-class region. And that's the short list.

But as they say, all good things must end. The Long Island Wine Council announced this week that Jane, a native South African who has traveled the globe extensively, will step down from her position with the Council in May. She and her husband, Frank Lynn, will move to London later this year, where she will run an international strategic communications consulting practice.

"In line with our mission, Jane has helped raise recognition of our wine region as a producer of quality wines and a desirable tourism destination," said Council president Marco Borghese. "The structure the Council now has in place will enable us to continue in a proactive and professional manner." "I am proud to have had the opportunity to represent this region and the great wines being produced here," said Jane. "There is a definite buzz about the Long

Fostering Art For All

Riverhead's Community School Of The Arts: A Very Special Place For Students Of All Ages

By Roy Bradbrook

The executive director of the East End Arts & Humanities Council, the Riverhead-based organization that operates our region's only Community School of the Arts, likes to grab peoples' attention by saying that her students range in age from six months to ninety years. Although Patricia Snyder admits that this sounds like a tall story, it's true. This bustling establishment offers a wide range of specialized music programs designed to teach parents and caregivers how to use music in the developmental upbringing of children, literally from the time of their birth. At the other end of the spectrum, Betty Fogg, at the tender age of 90, still travels from Southampton every other week to keep her piano skills well tuned.

Cultural development in its widest and truest sense is the mission of the East End Arts Council. As you walk through the corridors of the two historic houses on East Main Street in Riverhead that form its headquarters, in one you will be surrounded by art exhibits, where shows are curated by Elizabeth Malunowicz, and in the other you will hear the varied sounds of violins, saxophones, pianos and solo voices drifting from behind closed doors.

And all of this really represents only a small portion of the Council's varied agenda. "Since the Council took over the ailing East Suffolk School of Music back in 1995, we have developed extensive music and visual arts programs," said Ms. Snyder. "Now through the 'Kindermusik' and 'Musikgarten' classes, which cover ages from birth to about 7, over 100 children and their parents are currently focusing on ways in which music and movement can improve their child's life. Curiosity, emotional development, self-control, language skills, balance and movement all benefit during these vital formative years."

As children grow older, there are opportunities to learn to play virtually every type of instrument or to sing, either in group classes or on an individual basis. "About the only instruments we haven't taught are the harp and tuba," Ms. Snyder joked. She explained that students are expected to provide their own instruments but have never been turned away because they couldn't afford either the instrument or the classes. Not that more instruments as well as more funds for all the school's activities wouldn't be welcome. It is a challenge to keep good administrative staff onboard as well as good teachers, and scholarships are very important in the school's objective of never turning someone away. This ensures that exceptional talents such as Ishan Arvell Johnson, who appeared a couple weeks ago as a "Who's Here" feature in Dan's Papers after giving a wonderful recital at the Vail Leavitt Music Hall, get a

Seeing Things In A Different Light: The New Work Of Alan Bull

Last July, I had the pleasure of interviewing artist Alan Bull at the opening of his show at Riverhead's Blue Door Gallery. Though currently living in Newburyport, Mass., Alan traces his Long Island roots, through Orient's Terry family, back many generations. Much of his work reflects the changing East End landscape – captured through images of vintage farm trucks and other vestiges of a forgone time – but new work represents what I described last July as "both a departure and an arrival." With few exceptions, rural scenes were strikingly absent from that show, but one got the sense that Alan is maturing into a place where he's more inclined to express his vision in new terms. "I want to show people what I'm interested in now," said Alan. "I'm painting some of the same places but in a completely different way than I was five years ago. I see the change, the growth in my work. And it's very exciting."

Island wine region out there now and connoisseurs are recognizing more and more that the region's wines are truly world-class."

Jane Baxter Lynn and John Perry have become personal friends of mine over the years, and they are two of the Long Island wine industry's finest, in every respect.

"I know for certain that wherever I am in the world," said Jane, "I will always be an ambassador for the wines of Long Island."

Though you may be far away, Jane, I have no doubt you'll always be here in spirit. And aren't we, as a region, so much the better for the role you've played in our history. Thank you for everything, but especially for putting your heart in it. Cheers.

chance to develop. The New York State Council on the Arts offers the school scholarships as well as general funding, the Town of Southampton grants funds, and the Town of Riverhead owns the buildings that house the school and art gallery.

Members of the EEAC staff include coordinators who cover various aspects of the school's activities. Melissa Tyte covers the music programs, Lisa Baglivi the visual arts, Catherine Gerardi covers communications, and Maggie Kritsberg is responsible for education services. There are around 35 part-time tutors, the majority of whom are highly qualified teachers and graduate students.

Artists can indulge their creativity in drawing, watercolor or even something as esoteric as "solarplate" etching, where sunlight and water replace the conventional acids in the creation of a printing plate. And how about street painting? Yes, once a year, the parking lot by the Peconic River becomes a canvas to anyone who wants to try their hand at this century-old tradition that sadly has died out in so many cities and countries. Transient art – such as the wonderful ice carvings that are a main feature of virtually every cruise line's agenda, and sand sculpture, which is so popular on the beach on hot summer days – has a particular appeal of its own. Perhaps it's the almost vandalistic pleasure of waiting and watching for temperature, rain or the inexorable waves to wreck havoc! This will be the eighth year of the street painting festival, which will be held on Sunday May 30, from noon till 5 p.m., and it is expected that over 100 painters of all ages and talents will spend four hours frantically completing their creations. This is always a major fundraiser for the school, with many companies and individuals sponsoring areas to be painted.

Also during the summer, two-week Renaissance Kid Camps for 5- to 7-year-olds and four week camps for 8- to 12-year-olds will cover a diverse range of subjects from musical theater to dance and visual arts, culminating in a show put on by the campers. Last year nearly 150 children came from as far away as Greenport, Southampton and Bellport to attend these camps.

For those who speak out against public funding for the arts, it's a pity that they can't see and hear what is being done here in Riverhead. They should meet students such as the young 7th grade student who comes from a difficult home environment and who found herself in special education classes. In fact, only three years ago she was almost categorized as "borderline retarded," until one day, for some unknown reason, she picked up a flute and became entranced with learning to play it. As she learned the instrument her other skills leapt out of all proportion, to such an extent that she is now in the mainstream academically.

Many studies have shown that children who are regularly exposed to and engage in any form of the arts regularly achieve more in academic subjects and develop better social skills. Thanks to the devoted work of administrators and teachers at the East End Arts Council and Community School of the Arts, these benefits are now more readily available to children in our area.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood in The Hamptons

This wobbly week I'd like to review a current weightless wonder following the months of cloudy, dust-of-ashes-blinding rancor instigated by Mel Gibson's The Passion of the Christ. There are times when I enjoy a heated debate, but I gave up when the New York Times reviewer began the review with references to The Simpsons, and another intellectual giant said, "What do you know? I thought that movie was made by Mel Brooks." Now, that I'd like to see! I am appalled by the passion for doo-doo dipping (Mel Brooks' signature work level) existing even in those over 12 years of age. Incidentally, The Passion of Mr. Gibson's title refers to the original meaning of suffering, not fervent enthusiasm. Not many of his critics know that, or have seen Carl Theodore Dreyer's 1928 silent film The Passion of Joan of Arc wherein its star Maria Falconetti was actually more than singed by fire. It stands resolutely as one of the finest and most influential works of cinema. I'll move on to a light favorite since I am the kind of guy who collapsed in tears at simply the opening titles of Schindler's List.

Just in time to take the seriousness out of the primaries and the upcoming election and reduce the entire American political system to hornswoggling buffoonery, comes the painstakingly lovable Welcome to Mooseport. Mooseport being a small all-American town full of small American eccentrics who are colorless, colorful folk who are totally ineffectual – so weak that even the Maine town the film takes place in had to have the Ontario, Canada town, Port Perry stand in for it. The feeble plot of Mooseport (written as if by Pat Buchanan for a Fourth of July speech to be given by George Bush the first) had to be shored up by the formidable Gene Hackman as a popular ex-president coming back to roost in his vacation home, Mooseport, a town that in the 1930s Frank Capra movies might have been populated by salt-of-the-earth individuals, but is now taken up by boobs. The one-time president also fits into that category. He has a bunch of Secret Service men and aides to help him tie his golf shoes. He's harassed by a shrewish ex-wife. That's shrewish, not Jewish. Both Mels have their detractors. I don't have any except for the person who was incensed that I misspelled Leonardo Di Caprio's name. Christine Baranski is the very high-pitched, vocal ex-wife who won't release her talons from the ex-Prez's money. However, he, the affable retired Prez, runs into clean-cut, nice dispositioned veterinarian Maura Tierney and wants to date her. Here the sputtering plot bubbles up a rubbery skin. She's been dating and waiting for a proposal from one of the more homey and inept nudnicks of Mooseport, handy-Mr. Fix-it, Ray Romano of "Everybody Loves Raymond" TV sitcom popularity. Since I don't know of his ability on that show, I can only write that he fits the role with a certain ease. He could easily be as soft-brained of a candidate for the office of mayor of Mooseport as the ex-president who has also been asked to take the job, while growing fonder of the charming veterinarian.

You will know instantly when you hear of handy-man Ray being referred to as "the one genuinely honest man," that this movie is as phony as a ten dollar bill with a portrait of Jefferson Davis on it. But, why not? Wasn't ex-president Davis worthy? Is our political process a joke? Are we a joke? Are our men as dumb as movies make them? Is it possible to ask the tough questions? How can we keep making dumb movies that get dumber when they evoke Kennebunkport and stop there – short of any kind of statement of real American politics? I'd gladly accept something controversial – even if it hurts. Mel Gibson has given us something to think about – and it hurts.

ART COMMENTARY By Marion Wolberg Weiss

ARTS-IN-EDUCATION: FORMER STUDENTS AT AVRAM GALLERY Part 5

Proving that you can go home again, three former Southampton College art students are showcasing their work at the annual exhibition commemorating deceased art professor, Robert Munford.

The presentation also demonstrates that Ruby Jackson, Linda Marbach and James Della-Volpe speak well for the College's Art Department. Obviously, the works also speak well for the artists themselves.

While Ms. Jackson's abstract multimedia style is familiar to many viewers, her current series possesses an unusual dimension: literally. The artist goes beneath the water to give us a subjective view of the sea world; by so doing, she also expands our notion of life and death. And all those experiences in between.

Ms. Jackson's life-affirming encounter with the underwater world is vibrant, colorful and glittering. (Speaking of glitter, Janet Culbertson uses a similar technique to manifest an opposite effect: above-the-ground pollution.)

Conversely, the artist's pieces evoke a near-death experience as well. This ambiguity is one of Ms. Jackson's strongest traits, her technique reinforcing the idea with its contradictory preciseness and spontaneity.

Linda Marbach's "Girded" stoneware with painted woven leather also illustrates an opposing sensibility. There's something formal and "male" about her military-like clothing, but there's a feminine side, too, with the use of a soft material for the shirt.

The military motif is carried

out in her torsos with gold metallic thread. Yet there's a hint of the feminine here also, the circular loops providing a gracefulness to the design.

Works by James Della-Volpe continue the concept with their opposing sensibilities. On one hand, his figures seem lost in their environment, surrounded and restricted by geometric shapes. Even so, there's a sense of freedom exerted by the "male," counterbalanced by the fact that the forms are well-grounded.

It's obvious that Mr. Della-Volpe's celebration of Matisse, by his own admission, is present here in his point-of-view and color.

The exhibit will be on view at Southampton's Avram Gallery until March 12.

HONORING THE ARTIST: ELEANOR MEIER

While most people look forward to retirement, some find that it's not always as fulfilling as they thought it would be. Not so with this week's cover artist, Eleanor Meier. In fact, retirement is more than she thought it would be. Part of the reason is that Ms. Meier loved teaching art even if she had been doing it for over thirty years. ("Some of my students have become friends," she notes.) And it wasn't as if she and her husband would now have a chance to move after her retirement. Ms. Meier likes living exactly where she's been for forty-seven years, near the water and near New York City. A perfect location.

So why is retirement perfect for Ms. Meier? First, because now she can have time to take courses at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. (Don't all retired teachers want to go back to school?)

As she tells it, "I'm basically a self-taught artist, although I have an MA from SUNY at Stony Brook, but they didn't have a masters in studio when I went."

Secondly, now she has time to take early morning walks before starting to create her watercolors. (Some retired teachers still get up at 5 a.m.) A favorite subject is the tulip, a blossom she finds accessible and appropriate for a vertical format. She will often surround the flower with different fabrics, designing the composition on the diagonal. (One of her watercolors hung in the Embassy of New Guinea as part of the Art in Embassy program.)

Now Ms. Meier can also do her own art whenever she wants to, often working with friends in a group with a model they have hired. "This way," she explains, "we can share ideas, exhibit together, and critique each other's work."

Retirement means that Ms. Meier can take on extra activities and responsibilities as well, like her current one as President of the Catharine Lorillard Wolfe Art Club. "It's a real learning experience," she says. "I get to know artists from around the country; friendships develop."

Finally, retirement means that Ms. Meier can travel more. "By far, Italy is my favorite place," she says. "We lived there a year. Put me in Venice or Siena anytime. I'd also like to visit Antarctica to see the penguins."

In the meantime, however, Ms. Meier is perfectly content to go about her business here, noting that "Everyday is a joy. Days aren't really long enough."

theatre reviews: bug, five flights, & waiting for my man... by gordin & christiano

Tracy Lett's new play, Bug, made its New York premiere Off-Broadway at the Barrow Street Theatre this past Sunday. We attended a preview performance of the gripping new drama on Thursday and were stunned. The dark and edgy psychological tale set in a seedy motel room on the outskirts of Oklahoma City is an intoxicating blend of terror and comedy.

Shannon Cochran and Michael Shannon, who originated the starring roles to critical acclaim at London's Gate Theatre, are realistically riveting playing intensely lonely lovers. The acting is so good that the moment Ms. Cochran steps on stage as Agnes, you enter the life of the play and are drawn into the evening's unfolding drama. Agnes, a drug addicted young woman, is hiding out from her abusive ex-husband, Gloss (Michael Cullen), who has just received an early release from prison. Her best friend RC (Amy Landecker) comes to visit bringing Peter, a charismatically quiet stranger, and the action begins to heat up in the mysterious tale of isolation, paranoia, and delusion. Dexter Bullard expertly directs the fantastic ensemble of actors in a spellbinding staging, which builds in momentum as the characters are haunted by events from their past and visited by bugs – real or imagined. You never know where the action is going to take you next, and as a result the evening is a thrilling ride keeping you on the edge of your seat gasping and squirming, culminating in an explosive series of events which will leave you breathless.

This one is a rare event which will probably push plenty of buttons, generating some lively after theatre discussions in our current era of avian flu, West Nile virus, SARS, AIDS, and now mad cow disease.

The New York premiere production of Adam Block's impressive new comedy Five Flights at the Rattlestick Theatre in the West Village is a funny and often moving story about siblings, who must decide what to do with a crumbling aviary built by their recently deceased father to house the soul of their mother. The tale of the dysfunctional family's conflict is told from the point of view of a gay man under Kent Nicholson's stylized direction. Although Alice Ripley, a consummate comic actress, is a standout, every actor is outstanding in their respective roles, delivering deeply committed performances with depth and shading. The Rattlestick Playwrights Theatre continues its winning tradition of distinguishing itself with beautifully acted and realized productions of engaging, thought-provoking new works.

Waiting for My Man is the world premiere production of Tony Di Murro's dark comedy now playing at the DR2 Theatre. The three character drama featuring Craig Alan Edwards, Patrick Holder and Sharita Hunt is a humorless tale of three street people searching for redemption. The production boasts a first rate set, excellent lighting and talented actors in what is an extraordinarily designed, little, off-Broadway Theatre. Unfortunately, the direction by Anthony Patellis leaves much to be desired and gives the actors little help, resulting in postured vibrant performances, which seem at odds with the play's message. These actors, under Mr. Patellis', guidance play everything on one level, boldly demonstrating, instead of giving us any glimpse, of their underlying defeat. Their stories come too easily, their appearances, like the set, too squeaky clean and the effect is that of watching actors playing parts on a beautiful set rather than inhabiting the life of people living on the street.

Bug is playing at the Barrow Street Theatre, 27 Barrow St (at 7th Avenue) for tickets call 212-239-6200. The Rattlestick Theatre is at 224 Waverly Place between West 11th & Perry Streets (212-627-2556). Waiting for My Man is playing at the DR2 Theatre 103 East 15th Street for tickets call 212-505-0858.

in emotional crisis. The story begins as Ed (Jason Butler Harner), the play's narrator, stands by watching the action as his sister's friend/lover Olivia (Alice Ripley) quarrels with his sister-in-law Jane (Sara Surrey). Olivia wants to turn the aviary into a Fifth Day church (God created birds on the fifth day), where she can preach. Jane wants to tear it down and build a megastore with a parking lot. Tom (Matthew Montelongo), an attractive man passing by, is drawn into the squabble and falls for Ed. Tom is a shy, sexy professional hockey player and his teammate Andre (Kevin Karrick) encourages him to demonstrate his feelings for Tom. When he does so, Tom and Ed, at first tentatively then more aggressively, approach one another, but ultimately come together in what may be the longest most passionate gay kiss ever to be staged.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Olive oil sales have been surging for years. Initially, the American consumer associated olive oil with healthy cooking. In fact, it can reduce cholesterol levels and increase the good kind of cholesterol known as HDL or high-density lipoprotein. Needless to say, today the question is, "What kind of olive oil should I buy?"

Olive oil comes in pure, virgin and extra-virgin grades, the latter of which has the most fragrance and flavor. Extra-virgin olive oil, made from the first pressing of the olives, is obtained from the fruit of the olive tree by mechanical and physical methods under controlled temperature conditions. Because olive oils suit different purposes you may want to have several on hand in your pantry, purchased at different price points. The color of oil does not have any meaning as far as quality is concerned. Judge what you would choose to cook with and which you would use for dressings and marinades. Use your oils within a year and store in a closed bottle in a cool, dark cupboard. Light and heat can destroy olive oils – never store near a stovetop.

There is hardly any reason to buy labels that specify "lite." "Light" or "lite" doesn't mean lower in calories. This is simply a marketing gimmick; a tablespoon of olive oil contains 120-125 calories, the same as all other oils.

The Mediterranean diet uses olive oil to great advantage and Italian food, hands down, is one of the western world's favorite ways to eat.

CAPONATA

Serves 10-12

- 4-5 small eggplants (about two pounds)
- Coarse-grained salt (kosher)
- 3 medium sized red onions
- 5 celery stalks
- 1/4 pound black olives in brine, drained
- 1/4 pound green olives in brine, drained
- 1 cup extra virgin olive oil
- 1 pound fresh tomatoes, or canned plum, drained
- 4 tablespoons capers in wine vinegar, drained
- 2 tablespoons raisins
- 2 tablespoons pignoli (pine nuts)
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper
- 1/2 cup red wine vinegar
- 1 teaspoon granulated sugar

1. Wash the eggplants carefully, peel them, and cut into 1-inch squares. Put eggplant cubes in a colander and sprinkle with 2 tablespoons coarse salt. Place a dish or weight on eggplants to help squeeze out their bitter liquid and let stand 30 minutes. Slice the onions very thin and soak them in cold water for about 30 minutes. Meanwhile bring a pot of water to a boil. Add coarse salt to taste.

2. Cut celery stalks lengthwise into 3 strips, then cut the strips into 1/2-inch long pieces. When the water reaches a boil, add coarse-grain salt to taste and the celery. Parboil for 5-6 minutes. Drain the celery and let it dry on paper towels until needed. Pit the olives. Drain the onions and pat them dry with paper towels. Heat 1/2 cup of the oil in a skillet over medium heat. When oil is hot, add onions and saute for about 10 minutes.

3. Pass tomatoes through a food mill. Add the strained tomatoes to the skillet, then add the pitted olives, capers, raisins and pignoli. Cover the skillet and simmer for about 15 minutes. Let stand covered until needed.

4. Wash the eggplants carefully in cold water to remove salt and pat them dry on paper towels. Heat remaining oil in a different skillet. When oil is hot, add the eggplant cubes and saute for about 15 minutes. (The eggplant should be cooked but still firm.) Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Prepare a serving dish by lining it with paper towels. Transfer the cooked eggplant to the dish with a slotted spoon.

5. Add the parboiled celery to the skillet and saute for about 10 minutes. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Add the drained eggplant cubes to the skillet first with the sauce and simmer for about 10 minutes. Transfer the sautéed celery to the skillet with the eggplant. Add the wine vinegar and sugar and let the vinegar evaporate (about 10 minutes). Taste for salt and pepper and mix very well. Remove the pan from the heat and let stand for a few minutes. Then transfer the caponata to a serving dish and serve at room temperature.

ORECCHIETTE E BROCCOLI RABE

The timing is perfect – Orecchiette, the little "ear shaped" pasta, cooks in the same amount of time as the broccoli rabe. The garlic, capers and olive oil dressing offset the slightly bitter taste of the vegetable.

Serves 4-5

- 1 large bunch broccoli rabe
- Coarse salt
- 1 pound dried pasta such as orecchiette or fusilli
- 1/3 cup olive oil
- 2 large cloves garlic, finely chopped
- Salt and freshly ground pepper
- Pinch hot red pepper flakes
- 4 tablespoons capers packed in wine vinegar, drained
- 1/2 cup chicken broth or pasta cooking water
- 3-4 tablespoon coarsely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley

1. Trim the broccoli rabe, discarding the tough, bottom stems. Separate the stems from the flowerets and place them in two separate bowls of cold water to soak for 20 minutes.

2. Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil, add coarse salt to taste then add the pasta and the leafy stems. Two minutes after adding the leafy stems, add the flowerets. The pasta should be cooked al dente in about 8-12 minutes according to the brand. At the end of the cooking time, all three ingredients should emerge properly cooked.

3. Meanwhile, warm the oil in a skillet and saute the garlic for 40-50 seconds, until barely golden. Season with salt, pepper and the red pepper flakes. Add the capers and saute for 2 minutes longer. Add broth or pasta water, simmer and keep warm.

4. Drain the pasta and broccoli rabe and transfer to a large, warmed serving dish. Pour the sauce over the pasta and mix well. Sprinkle with parsley and serve immediately.

To Prepare Ahead: Prepare step 1 up to several hours ahead. Complete steps 2-4 before serving.

Dining In The Hamptons

You may have noticed some big changes at the space formally known as Rubi Red in Wainscott. Co-owner Beppe Desiderio bought out his partners and decided to entirely make-over the restaurant. The new menu focuses on Neapolitan cuisine courtesy of his brother, Lucio Desiderio, now co-owner and chef. The two have created Ristorante Capri, a warm and moderately priced restaurant with an adjacent wine and spirits bar – the Capri Lounge & Wine Bar – that will offer over a dozen wines by the glass and a dynamic menu of Italian tapas. Lucio is a graduate of culinary school in Naples, Italy and a veteran of restaurants in Capri, Bermuda, Palm Beach, and Naples, Florida. Besides the changes in the kitchen, the 116-seat restaurant has undergone a major facelift. The lounge area and dining room each have separate entrances. Dining room renovations included enclosing the pizza oven area, amber stucco walls, a mosaic of the rocks of Capri (known as the faraglioni), enhanced lighting by way of small iron sconces, new chairs and antique hutches. For more info on the new Ristorante Capri call 907-8031.

OASIS Waterfront Restaurant & Bar in Sag Harbor will reopen for the season on Friday, March 5th. They will be open Friday through Sunday for dinner starting at 5:30 p.m. The restaurant will also be open for Sunday brunch from 11 a.m. - 3 p.m. For further information, contact OASIS at 725-7110.

CLIFF ROBERTSON HONORED

The President, Board of Governors and the Film Committee of the National Arts Club in New York presented Cliff Robertson, who has a home in Water Mill, with their Honorary Lifetime Membership. The evening included a film retrospective of Mr. Robertson's work. The actor made a gracious acceptance speech and told an entertaining story about rehearsing with Joan Crawford on his second film. Mr. Robertson won an Academy Award for his unforgettable role as Charly in the film of the same name.

How To Decide On The Perfect Wedding Dress

Dress by Vera Wang

Dress by Kenneth Pool for Amsale

Dress by Jennifer Dule Couture

Your wedding day will be one of the most memorable days of your life. You have fantasized about this day since you were a little girl. From the moment the engagement ring is put on your finger, visions of walking down the aisle in the most beautiful dress are all you can think of. Bridal magazines such as Modern Bride, Martha Stewart and InStyle will help take you on a visual journey into the world of weddings and dresses.

The time of year your wedding is planned for may influence your choice of fabric and style. There is an assortment of colors these days that includes variations on not just white and ivory, but hues of pale pinks and blues. Detailing that will adorn your gown can range from pearl and crystal appliqués to simple lace touches and modest hand-sewn embroidery. Whatever the case may be, options abound.

One of the key elements to consider is finding a bridal salon or wedding dress designer that will make you feel comfortable and confident. At Jennifer Dule Couture in Manhattan, you will receive the attention and expertise that you deserve. Jennifer has been designing exquisite wedding gowns for twenty-five years and creates an intimate relationship with each and every bride-to-be with her personal touch and honest advice. During your visit, Jennifer helps you visualize your ultimate wedding gown through the use of sketches and sample fabrics. She uses the highest quality imported European fabrics, hand-made beads from as far away as India and delicate lace. Many of the materials that are used are one-of-a-kind. Most of her clients come to her with an idea already in mind. They may like the combination of the bodice from one dress and the skirt of another that they would like designed to fit perfectly.

Jennifer is highly regarded for her signature corsets. Strapless corset bodices combined with full skirts are very popular. "This will be the most expensive and formal dress that they may ever wear and they trust my input." She recommends that you allow at least six months before your wedding day to select a dress.

Amsale is another top wedding gown designer that has dressed many of our beautiful Hamptons' brides. I recently spoke to Robert Taylor, Amsale's Director of Marketing, who told me that strapless gowns remain the most popular. Robert has seen an increase in the use of sheer, flowy fabrics such as chiffon and organza. The slim A-line dress is growing in popularity by defining a modern version of the traditional A-line created with a silky slip skirt instead of the standard full puffy skirt.

High-end bridal salons such as Saks Fifth Avenue and Bergdorf Goodman employ only the best and most well-trained consultants. They take the time with each bride-to-be to get a better sense first of what they're looking for and what will be flattering for their figure. If you're looking to select from an assortment of different designers, then I recommend taking a trip into Manhattan to visit the bridal salon at Bergdorf Goodman. At Bergdorf's you will select from Badgley Mischka, Amsale, Carolina Herrera, Antel Sanchez, Oscar de La Renta, Melissa Sweet and Evalina Schmidtke, whose line Bergdorf exclusively carries.

Saks Fifth Avenue bridal salon offers a wide selection of top designers. Elizabeth Fillmore, Vera Wang, Christos, Ulla Maija, Kenneth Pool, Amsale and Reem Acra are just a few.

If you're going out on your own to explore the vast world of more out of the way bridal salons, here are a few tips to keep in mind: 1. Petite sizes are recommended to make use of dresses with sleek lines to make you appear taller; 2. Tall women should stay clear of the big puffy dresses, but can wear bustles very well; 3. Sweetheart and scoop necks are recommended for women with larger busts; 4. If you have a smaller bust, strapless will always work, as will an Empire designed dress; 5. As far as sleeves go, don't be afraid to bare your arms. However, if you're determined to cover them up, you may want to select a sheer fabric or lace for a more elegant look that will still allow for arms to show; 6. Make certain that you trust your bridal consultant and that the establishment has a good reputation; 7. Be open to a variety of styles. You may find that you look better in a completely different style than you anticipated; 8. Select the waistline that is appropriate for your body type. A-line skirts are the most universal and flattering. If you have a short waist, you may also want to try the drop waist-line. If you want your waist to look smaller, go with vertical lines. Corseted bodices also have a slimming effect; 9. Make sure you take someone you trust with you for a second opinion; 10. Last but not least, make sure you love your dress. Don't second guess yourself.

Your wedding day is like no other. It is the one day that you will look and feel like a princess. So whether you're a vision in white, ivory, pink or blue, take your time to make sure you select the dress that's perfect just for you.

Picture Your Wedding Day

A diamond is forever, but so are the photographs, which capture the day you say, "I Do." So while you're scouting the location, writing the guest list, and booking the band, be sure to make finding your wedding photographer a top priority.

Michael Cody, located on the North Fork, who has bookings into 2005, says, "It should be as important as finding the dress." And the fit between the photographer and the couple is just about as crucial as the fit of that dress. Deborah Kalas, a portrait, equestrian, and wedding photographer in East Hampton, agrees. "There has to be chemistry between the photographer and the couple. I don't just photograph the wedding. I work with that couple afterward, helping them put together the album and even picking pictures for the thank you card."

"After all, this is the person you have chosen to tell the story of your wedding," says Tanya Lawson, a former fashion photographer, who, since 1991, shoots weddings almost exclusively. Lawson, based in Sag Harbor, is currently working on a book called Hot Shots, which advises couples how to get a good photo on any budget. And while future brides and grooms might get useful advice from the book, you won't be using Lawson, Cody, or Kalas unless you are willing to allocate a significant sum of money for photography. Lawson says, "It's about following rather than directing." This trend is so prevalent that some couples want their photos to be all black and white. While most couples do not end up with a wedding album all in black and white, there is a tendency to include at least some black and white and sepia photos in the completed album.

These photographers document a wedding with the approach of capturing a feeling. Some couples say they don't want any posed pictures.

Kalas says, "I don't insist on anything, but try to convince them to give me at least 5 minutes of portrait time." The average time she does spend on portraiture, or family shots, is usually between 20 and 45 minutes. Lawson, too, spends relatively little time on these kinds of photos and says, "If a couple wants more, then I'm not the photographer for them." Her philosophy is that you shouldn't miss your wedding while taking photos of your wedding. Cody says, "These are the shots the parents want." And when he does do these kinds of pictures, he makes them as casual as possible.

If it's a feeling you're choosing to capture in your wedding pictures, how do you choose the photograof money for photography.

There was a time, after 9 /11, where the trend was to spend less on all the celebrations, but now couples have returned to spending more on the wedding and the pictures.

What couples get for their money today looks nothing like wedding albums of the past, with a posed photo of the groom guiding the bride's hand as she cuts the cake. Today's style is distinctly jour-

Dan's Papers WEDDING GUIDE

It's His Day, Too

A wedding day is the celebration of two people uniting their love. Although society tends to focus on the bride's attire, the groom should look equally handsome. After all, ladies, this may be the one-day you can influence the way the man in your life will look and dress.

The entire experience of getting married can be one of the most stressful times in your life, especially for men. Family, friends and co-workers are constantly questioning your every move. It seems that the expenses are building and all you can dream about is going on the honeymoon.

But don't fret. Slow down, and take a deep breath. Attention all future grooms: it's time to get beautiful. That's right! Cross over and get comfortable with pampering yourself. You'll need to pay extra attention to your skin, hair, mind, body and attire before the big day.

First and most importantly, remember to get enough sleep. All work and all play will make Johnny an unattractive boy. Cut down on your alcohol intake, smoking (if you smoke), drink at least 8 glasses of water and eat plenty of fruits and veggies. Your skin craves vitamin E and C. Moisturize, and don't get too much sun. You may even want to get a facial to re-vitalize your skin. Just think, you actually have an excuse to get one – you're getting married! There's no turning back now, well, except for the hands-of-time, with a fresh new glow on your face.

Try different ways to wear your hair (if this applies to you) weeks before the wedding. Find a style that you feel comfortable with, one that will be easy to maintain. Experiment with hair products that will work with your type of hair. Don't be afraid to ask your hairdresser for advice.

Finally, select your wardrobe. Take some pointers from expert consultants at a reputable tuxedo establishment. Try suits that best express your personality while making you look like a million dollars. Give James Bond a run for his money. Make Brad Pitt wish he looked as good as you. Remember, "You look marvelous," as Billy Crystal says.

Here are a few guidelines taken from the book For The Groom by Colin Cowie, published by Delacorte Press, in 2000.

Daytime Informal

Winter Dark business suit, navy blue blazer with khaki trousers, navy blue blazer with cream or white flannel trousers.

Summer Light-colored suit or navy blazer with khaki, white or cream linen trousers. Plain shirt with four-in-hand tie, plain coordinated shoes.

Evening Informal

Winter Dark business suit or tuxedo, depending on bride's level of formality.

Summer Navy or light-colored business suit or tuxedo, depends on bride's level of formality.

Daytime Semiformal

Black or dark gray sack coat, gray waistcoat. White, pleated shirt or soft white shirt with standard four-in-hand tie. Plain black shoes.

Evening Semiformal

Winter Tuxedo

Summer Tuxedo or white dinner jacket with formal black trousers. White pleated shirt with turn-down collar. Black vest or cummerbund and matching bow tie or cravat. Black patent-leather dress shoes or plain black calfskin shoes.

Daytime Formal

Black or gray morning coat ("cutaway") with black or gray striped trousers and gray waistcoat. Starched white shirt with turndown collar with black-and-gray striped tie or dress ascot. Gray gloves. Black patent-leather dress shoes.

Evening Formal

"White tie and tails," lack tailcoat and trousers, white piqué waistcoat. White starched-bosom shirt with wing collar. White bow tie. White gloves. Black patent-leather dress shoes.

Now that you have accomplished all you needed to, relax and have a great time on your wedding day! Just keep thinking, the honeymoon will follow.

Alternative Wedding Spaces

As difficult as setting the stage for the proposal, so too is the quest for finding the "right" spot to say "I do." Most couples desire to make their wedding a testament to their commitment, interspersed with individuality and sprinkled with personal style. What may appeal to some, like a traditional joining held in a church or temple, may not necessarily feel right for everyone. Just like snowflakes, no two weddings are alike.

On Eastern Long Island, spectacular landscapes and picturesque beaches abound along with Gold Coast mansions and other unique settings to provide plentiful backdrop choices for prospective brides and grooms to jump the broom.

Mother Nature often tops the guest list, particularly for couples who elect to have their ceremonies in the great outdoors amid a canopy of green and blue. Besides the casual elegance a backyard garden wedding affords, there are numerous ocean and bay beaches on the North and South Fork to accommodate your nuptials. In choosing an East End oceanfront wedding there are several factors to consider, above and beyond "The Farmer's Almanac."

You will need to get a permit in order to be married on the beach and depending on the hamlet, usually 150 guests are permitted. For larger weddings you will need to secure permission from the Town Board. In some places, permits are granted for the ceremony only. While you are allowed to marry on the beach, you are not allowed to party there (no alcohol), and you are required to provide a Port-a-potty for your guests.

Last but not least, remember beach parking is very limited, so providing guest transportation is something to think about. Remember that the beaches are open to the public, meaning that during high season not only are you subject to crowds, but additional approval by the Supervisor of Parks is required. For more information on East End beach weddings, log onto www.southforkweddings.com.

If you're looking for something that says "new school" in a classic "summers on the beach" kind of way, what about a clambake where someone else does all the diggin' and a-fixin'? Captain Phil Gay, owner of East End Clambakes Catering, Michael Bunce of B&B Clambakes and Troy Conrad of Hampton Clam Bake and Catering, Co., offer great (as in "off-the-beaten-track") location ideas, along with sumptuous picnic fare all cooked to perfection and presented exquisitely. For more information, check out: www.hamptonsweddings.com

Sure to add magic to the most special of days is the setting of Atlantis Marine World Aquarium in Riverhead. Guests tour privately through the ruins of the Lost City of Atlantis, enchanted by its magical wonders, which culminate with your nuptials. With a bevy of sea creatures to delight and mesmerize, the Aquarium features North America's largest Coral Reef display, a 120,000-gallon shark tank, an Amazon Rain Forest exhibit and over 500 different species of marine life. An in-house party planner is on hand to help execute every detail and will customize a menu to fit any budget requirement. For more information call 631-208-9200.

Nestled in pastoral countryside amid long stretches of vibrant green sit several prominent Long Island vineyards, each offering prospective brides and grooms a unique and memorable setting in which to celebrate their vows. The magnificent beauty of wine country and balmy sea breezes blend together to contribute to the making of many a dream wedding. From the Wolffer Estate Vineyard and Stables on the South Fork to Galluccio Family Wineries on the North Fork along with numerous vineyards in between there are a variety of choices to appeal to a wide range of tastes. The common denominator – extraordinary, elegant and spectacularly beautiful venues complimented by informative and supportive event staff to assist with every detail. Look to www.liwines.com for more information.

Willing to take it to the very end? Then the Montauk Lighthouse (www.montauklighthouse.com) has your names written all over it. Standing 100 feet tall, the lighthouse is the oldest in New York State and was commissioned by George Washington in 1792. Talk about withstanding the test of time, its beauty, history and endless ocean vistas make it a frequent wedding site – a fitting tribute, no doubt, to the wonderful possibilities rising on the horizon as you become husband and wife.

Dan's Papers WEDDING GUIDE

The First Dance

Two dear friends of mine, after dating nine-and-a-half years, decided to marry, kindling within me (always the bridesmaid, never the bride) – hope. She's a classically trained dancer. You know, from the ranks of Julliard and then stints here and there on the stage. He listens (and dances) to a different beat. So you can imagine the amused curiosity among her inner circle when she confessed they had signed up for dance lessons.

It's really not that unusual, especially now in the digital age where a couple's first dance is almost always recorded by their videographer. That's why each year scores of the recently engaged opt for dance lessons in order to avoid fast-forwarding or wincing through an otherwise beautiful and memorable video of their big day. Going back to my friends, it's not that they can't dance, but to dance well together – to glide across the floor like a modern day Fred and Ginger – might just require a little S.O.S.

"A lot of prospective brides and grooms come to us for help," said Jennifer Holguin, of Arthur Murray Dance Studio in Southampton, near the Omni. She and her husband and dance partner, Victor Holguin, own the studio. "We ask that couples give us six months, but that doesn't mean they can't learn if the wedding is one week away."

Curious about the process, I quizzed Jennifer about how it works. Can they help couples narrow down selections? Can they offer suggestions for songs? Do they specialize in any particular dance style or technique? What are some of the most popular dances? What if the wedding is really in a week? What about the couple that wants to make sure they move well together but neither has a clue how to dance (remember that episode from "Seinfeld" where Elaine does the Watusi?)

Ever patient and reassuring, Jennifer deftly answered each question. First she pointed out, "It takes more than a couple of lessons to effectively learn a dance. It's a skill and like any other with practice and preparation any couple can take the spotlight with confidence and grace." Depending on where a couple is – beginner or advanced – her advice made sense. I equated it to learning a new language or playing an instrument. The more you work at it the more adept you become.

As far as specializing in any particular dance style, Arthur Murray is renowned for their instruction of partnership or contact dancing. Styles such as the Foxtrot, Lindy/Swing, Salsa, Rumba, Waltz, Mambo, Cha-Cha, and Tango are extremely popular. "The Foxy is the most popular dance step we teach," said Jennifer. "We beg, borrow and steal steps from both the Foxtrot and the Rumba."

Another popular place catering to prospective brides-and grooms-to-be is the East End Ballroom located in Riverhead. George Smith, owner and dance instructor, explained, "Whether a couple chooses the classic romance of the waltz, the exuberant energy of a swing dance or the intensity of an Argentine Tango, it's the music that will determine the steps. However, if a song hasn't been chosen yet, a couple may want to consider what type of dance they would prefer to do and work backwards from there."

Either way, Mr. Smith or the Holguins are happy to make suggestions for songs or will work with a couple to choreograph a dance to whatever song they choose. Intrigued, I asked Jennifer what her most unusual request has been. After a moment's hesitation, perhaps changing the names to protect the "not-so-innocent," she said, "The Hustle." The Hustle? Apparently Disco is alive and dwelling happily on the East End. "But what we are seeing is a surge in Latin dancing."

In teaching a couple to dance, each team explained they take their students through the dances step-by-step, mastering one before moving on to the next. Then the steps are linked and before you know it – voila! The couple is navigating the dance floor comfortably.

All this talk has me thinking. Even though I'm not walking down the aisle just yet, wouldn't it be fun to try something new? For more information, including a complimentary lesson, give Jennifer Holguin of Arthur Murray Studios a call at 631-283-1488, or George Smith at the East End Ballroom at 631-208-9880. –Aurrice Duke

Honeymoon Hideaways

The long awaited day finally arrives. The bells ring joyously, the rice is thrown high and hopeful, and the promises of life and love are spoken with nothing but sincerity. Everyone wishes you well, eats cake and enjoys the months of strategic planning that the two of you finally can put in the past. Now there's one thing left for you to do. And that's to fly off into the sunset and live happily ever after.

Sounds simple. But where do you go? The infamous honeymoon destination question always seems to pose some problems. Do beaches and warm sunshine appeal to you? Or would a romantic escape to a private world strike your fancy? Or maybe an exotic adventure on land or by sea would be more your speed?

Whatever dream you decide to embark upon, it's most important that you both have the same hopes and expectations of the trip. There are tons of options and the possibilities are endless. Here are a couple of places to prepare you for dreaming liftoff.

A Hawaiian Classic.

If the classical beach getaway with warm sands, crystalline water and peaceful sunshine is the path that the two of you chose, Hawaii may fit the bill. The six Pacific isles are both luscious and beautiful and offer lots of picturesque havens for you to bask in. For instance, you can stay in a quaint bungalow in Maui or a resort room at the Hotel Hana-Maui, and venture to Maui's Seven Sacred Pools, which surely will instill magnificent memories of waterfalls and untouched greenery. Or you can check into a solar-powered tent at the Molokai Sheraton to snuggle up next to your special someone. Whether you prefer a charming cottage with private views like can be found on Kauai's north shore at the Secret

Beach Hideaway, or if a grand resort like the Waikiki's Hilton Hawaiian Village is what you are looking for, there is a niche on one of the islands for everyone to enjoy.

And exploration on the Hawaiian islands will leave no one desire unquenched. Day trips can include a hike through the sugarcane-covered isthmus that divides east and west Maui or to Mauna Kea, a volcano taller than Mount Everest, or even to check out the enormously deep crater, Haleakala. There's never a dull moment, unless, of course, you want there to be. Find out more details at www.honeymoon-finder.com, where Hawaii is listed first on the list of top destinations, or pick up the February issue of Conde Nast's Traveler magazine. Liberty Travel also currently has exclusive honeymoon packages if you decide to see the surreal Hawaiian sunsets and take in a moonlight luau for your honeymoon.

A Costa Rican Adventure.

If the adventure-driven explorers in you and your sweetheart take the reins, you may end up driving through the vast rain forests and exotic national parks that Costa Rica is famous for. And if a trip to the second largest accessible volcanic crater in the world, at the Poás Volcano National Park, with its magnificent colors and unique essence doesn't blow your mind, a venture to the La Paz Waterfall Gardens will surely put you in explorer bliss.

With its spring-like climate year-round, the glo-

Dan's Papers WEDDING GUIDE

Perfect Petals

On your wedding day, one detail that should never be overlooked is flowers. Flowers, you say, how important could flowers actually be? The importance of these silent spectators is enormous. Flowers are everywhere: on the altar, at the end of each pew, in the bride and bridal party's hair, in their hands, and on each groomsman's and groom's lapel. The mothers and fathers of the bride and groom get them, the grandparents, too. Flowers are used for centerpieces, wedding favors, decorations on the cake, around the cake, throughout the reception hall, and they won't be ignored! Flowers should be showered upon you on this special day, so before you start having nightmares about everything that could go wrong, let's worry about one thing at a time. You want to make absolutely sure you're getting exactly what you want and that everything comes together as unified pieces to the whole theme or color scheme of the wedding.

Let's start with some locations to check out for all your wedding needs. For the absolute epitome of Hamptons chic or simplicity, Kim Jon Designs in Water Mill is the place where you will find it all. Flowers and Co. in Southampton and the Sag Harbor Florist and Gift Shop also carry a fabulous assortment of floral arrangements for every style.

If you're looking for that classic wedding flower that will express simplicity, beauty, and take no attention away from you, of course, then daisies are your flower of choice. Blooming from May to June, daisies can be used as centerpieces, mixed with greens in a bridal bouquet, or hand-tied as bouquets for the bridesmaids. If you're looking for something different, something dramatic, a get-noticed flower, then calla lilies are the perfect choice. Funnel and horn-shaped extensions of the stem, called a spathe, calla lilies are available in an assortment of colors such as snow white, orange, or dark magenta. These flowers are gaining popularity in wedding bouquets, but have also been used as focal points of centerpieces or singly for bridesmaids to carry because of their spectacular appearance. Exquisite tropical flowers for summer are Dendrobium orchids, least expensive from April to August. These flowers can have a simple, understated look, or can be completely exotic depending on the look you're going for. They come in a spectrum of colors, so whatever your theme or mood may be, there is a color to fit.

Dendrobiums make exquisite additions to your hair, corsages and boutonnieres. Sprinkling them down the aisles and over tables gives the scene an added elegance. Dendrobiums can also be added to a centerpiece for a heavenly floral arrangement. If you're looking for a little full-bodied flavor, dahlias are the ones for you. Laden with petals, their colors are rich and lavish, and they are best used for centerpieces, pew decorations, and other sturdy arrangements. Other stunning summer flowers to consider are: the amaranthus, asters, bells of Ireland, blue cloud, carnations, roses, salvia, stephanotis, hydrangea, forget-me-not, peony, sweet pea, zinnia, and the sunflower

The new trend for the bride and groom in their ceremony send-off is throwing flower petals instead of rice. It has a beautiful, romantic feel that is definitely more visually appealing than the rice, and of course, there is no fear they will be swallowed by a bird or hit someone in the eye. The most popular choices for the groom's boutonniere are rosebuds, stephanotis, freesias, or miniature carnations, but the latest and most exciting trend is using vegetables such as the radish.

One bouquet style that is rising in popularity is the hand tied bouquet. This fresh bunch of flowers will give a "just picked" look of simple elegance to the bride and bridal party. Sweet peas, musk rose, and lisianthus are three great flowers that will give the bride the opportunity to send a message to the receiver. Selecting flowers with special meanings and writing romantic messages in them is a great way to let the ones you love know how much you care. In the past flowers only had to have a spectacular appearance, but now the trend is to also select flowers based on their fragrance. Gardenias, peonies, and tuberose are three sweet smelling gems that will be sure to keep everyone wrapped up in the moment of love and romance. Also the all white bridal bouquet still remains a timeless classic, including lily of the valley and orchids. Soft and romantic in style, whether held in the hands, or cradled lightly in the arm, elegance abounds when the stark white is matched against any backdrop. The "champagne wedding" theme is hot right now, where both the bride and atten-

Another idea to try is to tie a ribbon around each individual flower in the brides bouquet and then loosely tie them all together with a different colored ribbon. This will make for a very different bouquet tossing. Right before you toss the bouquet you untie the ribbon, fan the flowers, and throw them as high as you can. They'll separate and go to more than one girl, spreading the luck even further. For those family members that aren't included in the wedding party, each one can receive a flower from the bride's bouquet. When the bride comes down the aisle she can take a flower from each one, and once she gets to the end of the aisle, the mother and father of the bride will come and tie a ribbon around the bouquet. The last but definitely not least, latest and greatest trend that is sweeping the wedding world is the coordination of florists with caterers and cake bakers to provide floral decorations for the cake and buffet table. With flowers on the cake knife, goblets, or serving plates, these exquisite added details make such a difference in the overall ambiance during all the ceremonious festivities that will make your wedding modern, yet timeless and truly unforgettable for all the right reasons.

dants carry all-white, fragrant bouquets. A single lily, sunflowers, or posies add a very modern flair to any bouquet. Another popular trend has taken influence from the Victorian era using romantic, soft colored blush roses for arrangements. These flowers can either be placed in the bride's hair, bouquet, or carried by the flower girls. Mothers of the bride can be offered a simple, beautiful nosegay. Bridesmaids' bouquets are also doubling as centerpieces, getting the bouquets out of the way and making for a beautiful focal point.

Numbered Originals starting at $4,000

A unique gift for the bride on her wedding day could be one of the classical motifs from the Jack Kelege Designer Collection. The "Numbered Originals" are the art deco inspired ring collection that is handcrafted in platinum. The engraving, filigree and diamond settings are entirely done by hand to provide you with the perfect heirloom quality ring for years to come. A timeless gift on your special day for sure.

Available exclusively at Maxine's Diamonds and Fine Jewelry, 100 E. 58th Street, 10022, New York City, 212-335-1000, 1098, Newtown Lane, East Hampton, 631-329-8444, Jericho Turnpike, Woodbury, 516-496-8171, Jericho Turnpike, Commack, 631-462-9282.

Living Tree from $950 to $7,700

The living tree is the perfect gift for the wedding couple. The new family album for the 21st century is a unique multi media interactive CD that brings two families together. It celebrates their wedding, their family histories and traditions. Photography and genealogy only tell part of the story. Special audio and video messages or letters from grandmother to granddaughter, father to son, makes this a truly personalized family treasure. The collection celebrates and preserves the two families' histories, helps them get to know each other through photos and videos and connects the past to the present. It ensures that future generations will know the story of their roots. The photo collage is filled with images and an in-motion CD that presents their life images in a touching animated slide show that is set to their favorite music. The Living Tree Collection includes from 10 to 20 CD's that celebrate the wedding couple and their families.

Dan's Papers WEDDING GUIDE

Finding The Perfect Ring

According to the-history-of.net website, wedding rings began in the deserts of North Africa where ancient Egyptian civilization started, along the river Nile. The river was believed to be the bearer of all good fortune and life. "Sedges, rushes and reeds, growing alongside the well-known papyrus were twisted and braided into rings for fingers and larger bracelets for wrists."

The tradition has since been translated across the globe, remaining as a symbol of eternal love (a circle represents no beginning and no end). Wedding rings have always been worn on the third finger of the left hand. The belief is that the vein of this finger travels directly to the heart. The early rings wore out after a short period of time, and soon, rings were made using sturdier materials.

Today, standard designs of wedding rings are made from variations of gold and platinum. Choosing the perfect ring takes time, research and knowledge. Engagement rings and wedding bands continue to symbolize the commitment and love between two people. Once you have decided to take that step in life, there are a few things to learn about rings.

Although an engagement ring can feature a vast variety of gems, the traditional stone is the diamond. In judging a diamond, it's not the size of the diamond but the four C's that really make the difference.

Color: Although we hear of rare colored diamonds, such as Jennifer Lopez's pink diamond engagement ring, the standard rule is, the more colorless the white diamond, the better the quality. Diamonds are categorized on a scale from D (colorless) to Z (light yellow).

Cut: The cut of a diamond describes the way the diamond is faceted. The facets of the diamond allow the reflection of light. Well-cut diamonds will reflect light back and enhance their brilliance.

Clarity: Means how clear is the diamond. Many diamonds have inclusions: air bubbles, flaws, scratches or mineral deposits inside the diamond.

The fewer inclusions the diamond has, the more expensive it is.

Carat: Refers to the size of the stone. Again, bigger is not always better. The above information will probably influence the size of the diamond you decide to invest in. You should also consider the person you are buying the ring for. Get an idea of the style they like without giving the surprise away.

If you want to take a less traditional route, tattooed wedding rings are interesting. But, maybe that's not such a great idea. It's not as easy to take off your finger. Just ask Tommy Lee and Pamela Anderson. I would guess it's a little more painful to remove a tattooed ring than a piece of jewelry.

Antique wedding rings and bands have become very popular as well. Many jewelry designers are designing rings using platinum and filigree detailing to look antique; antique rings are much more intricate and unique. I think they tend to have more character. Or, you can have a ring designed especially for you.

Whatever decision you make regarding engagement rings or wedding bands, remember to do your homework. Work with a jeweler you can trust, and find that perfect ring.

Wedding Superstitions

I am a recently betrothed man. As most people know, planning a wedding is tough business. We've barely begun, and I'm already getting nervous. When you love someone enough to marry them, you also love them enough not to screw everything up by breaking some tradition or failing to follow the rules of ancient superstitions. There are a lot of them out there. How does a guy choose what to worry about? Every culture seems to have its own set of ideas, and while Colleen and I are Americans of Catholic and Protestant upbringing, one can never be too careful.

Even before the big day, the panic to do it right starts. The bridal shower, for example, has lots of considerations. Most distressing for the groom-to-be is having little control over what happens. I suppose it is the beginning of many tests of our trust. The first gift the bride opens should be the first gift she uses. I hope Colleen will remember. She doesn't like smoothies; but if it's a blender, she can make me one. Maybe I'll get lucky and she'll open some lingerie. My special lady friend has a knack for organization, so when I read that everything the bride says as she opens her gifts must be repeated on her wedding night, I didn't panic as much as you'd think. They say someone should be assigned to write down these comments during the shower, but if I know my girl as well as I think I do, she'll be doing the writing - no problem. Attendees: don't forget that the third person to give a gift will soon have a baby. If you don't have a serious guy, you might want to hold back.

Now comes the hard part. Each month and day of the week for the wedding day has been assigned a different outcome for our future life together. Monday for health, Tuesday for wealth, Wednesday best of all, Thursday for losses, Friday for crosses,

Saturday for no luck at all. Everyone gets married on Saturday and it's no wonder the divorce rate is as high as it is. We'd thought about Sunday. Let's hope the adage "If you don't have anything nice to say, don't say it at all," isn't the reason for Sunday's exclusion from this saying.

For the months, the poem is a bit more complete:

*Married when the year is new, he'll be loving,
kind & true,*

When February birds do mate, You wed nor dread your fate.

If you wed when March winds blow, joy and sorrow both you'll know.

Marry in April when you can, Joy for Maiden & for Man.

Marry in the month of May, and you'll surely rue the day.

*Marry when June roses grow, over land and

Those who in July do wed, must labor for their daily bread.

Whoever wed in August be, many a change is sure to see

Marry in September's shrine, your living will be rich and fine.

If in October you do marry, love will come but riches tarry.

If you wed in bleak November, only joys will come, remember.

When December snows fall fast, marry and true love will last.

October is the month we've discussed. We don't want to be poor, but unfortunately, for a freelance writer, it seems to fit. Maybe September and a different job are better ideas. I look good in a suit.

Speaking of clothing, there is another poem listing the pros and cons of dress color for the bride. Most

The Art Of The Invite

Wedding invitations, like all invitations, are personal. Couples hope to reflect their personality and set the tone for their occasion. It is, after all, the first communication the bride and groom will have with their guests. Each wants their day to stand out and say something distinct about them. This is what sends some on the quest for the unique.

Now, with even art, becoming high tech, it is possible to create just about any kind of invite you can imagine with just a computer. What once took hours to be designed in a print shop can now be put together in just minutes. The possibilities are so endless, that we seem to have forgotten the very distinguished touch a pen can make on paper, that handwritten script is an art.

Linda Pasca of Pen and Paper Calligraphy Design in Mattituck has not forgotten, and she has that touch. She uses the fine art of calligraphy to hand design everything from invitations to place cards to menus, for her very discerning clients. Her artistic invites are all beautifully scripted right down to the envelopes. She creates place settings that include place cards, table numbers and menus that all coordinate with the original design on the invitation. The work can later be custom framed as a keepsake. Some couples have their entire guest list penned and framed along with a copy of the invitation. Others frame the entire collection of mementos from their wedding, including the invite, place card, menus and poetry readings.

Her shell designs have become the most popular here on the East End where there are so many beach weddings. The shell collection includes place cards and table numerals with the scripting done on the actual shells. Each is done by hand, of course, in pen and ink in the client's script of choice. The shells are currently the most requested design style. On the North Fork, the winery motifs, rich with deep shades of fine handmade paper, are popular for autumn weddings. On one invitation, the calligraphy was created on real fall leaves, the writing in gold ink.

"Brides have become more discriminating," says Yvonne Wong of Double Happiness Designs in New York, who believes every event is unique. She finds that, in the more recent years her service has become more personalized. Double Happiness pays attention to detail by incorporating color, texture and custom designed logos to convey the message of the day. She takes that extra step to make the occasion one of a kind. The pocket envelope is one of her original designs and holds the invite as well as the response card. The design is hand cut from the envelope. One couple, who were married on the shore, had her create everything from monogrammed invitations to a gift bucket in keeping with their beach theme. The bucket included bottled water, flip flops, sunscreen and a CD of the couple's favorite music. Yvonne blends her Asian heritage and culture into her work, creating artful designs using Chinese writing and symbols combined with the English language. Some Asian clients request she write in both languages.

It is a thoughtful gesture to send a handcrafted invitation and a gift to receive one.

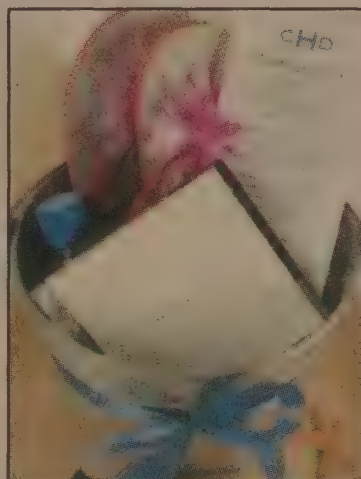

These artists sit down with their clients and get a feel for what kind of people they are, and learn a bit about what they love, where their interests lie, and they find a way to express it in their invitation, making it the hallmark of their occasion. Working closely with wedding planners and caterers, invitation artists find creative ways to add another special effect to the occasion. Dan's Papers WEDDING GUIDE

The Sweet Sensation of Wedding Cakes

Wedding cakes have become much more than traditional tiered layer cakes. Cakes have evolved in recent years into works of art. And if you want to have the most decoratively detailed cake, I suggest starting with the best.

Kate Manchester, local Sag Harbor resident and author of The Perfect Wedding Cake, created a book that covers everything you need to know about wedding cakes. Every page of her book, that includes thirty-five color photographs of glorious cakes, will help inspire and guide you and narrow-down your choices.

Sylvia Weinstock is perhaps the most famous wedding cake designer in the country. Her list of high-profile clients is endless. I had the pleasure of speaking with Sylvia last week to find out exactly what's in and what's out. Sylvia told me that today's bride is much more sophisticated. Women, waiting longer to get married, have established their own flare for style.

Sylvia finds that her clients desire cakes that allow their personal tastes to shine through. The first step she suggests is to make an appointment for a tasting. Sylvia meets with each bride and groom during the tasting to help in the selection of their cake and will sketch a design during your meeting.

You can log onto her website at www.sylviaweinstockcakes.com to see a variety of designs. Sugar fruit are popular as well, especially in the fall season. At Sylvia Weinstock, they can match the lace pattern on a bride's dress, a favorite flower or color scheme. Fillings can range from key lime and coconut to hazelnut and mocha.

Another reputable bakery in Manhattan is Cupcake Café. I have personally been a regular customer for years. It's hard to visualize that such beautifully decorated cakes are made in this modest establishment located on 39th Street and 9th Avenue. Cupcake Café's delightful all-buttercream cakes and, of course, cupcakes can be created specifically to your liking. Michael and Ann Warren opened Cupcake Café nearly sixteen years ago with the goal of offering uniquely decorated cakes that stand out. Some couples may decide to order a smaller wedding cake accompanied by an assortment of tiered cupcakes to offer more of a variety to their guests.

Locally, there is a company called Jeanne makes cakes in Wainscott, who will bake your dream cake as well. Many of her clients will bring pictures from magazines or ideas they have their hearts set on. She finds that wedding cakes are traditionally light in color; however, some couples are adding darker contrasts and accents to coordinate with the wedding party colors.

Mazzu's Catering French Cuisine & Patisserie in Water Mill is another well-known bakery that will design a cake or pastry assortment for your wedding day. Mazzu has an extensive background as a pastry chef, and studied at the famous Cordon Bleu in Paris. Her designs are highly regarded on the East End.

Wedding cakes vary widely in price and can be worked into your budget. Many couples may opt for a less formal cake, while others want to create a masterpiece. It all depends on your personal taste. Research as much as possible and make sure you sample the cake you decide on. I can't imagine having the perfect-looking cake without making certain it tastes perfect as well.

pher for the wedding? Lawson suggests, "Don't just look at the photographer's book, and picture yourself in the photos you see, but rather ask yourself, 'Does the photo record a moment?' After you have looked at several portfolios (and you can start by going to the photographer's website) you should set up an initial meeting.

The language of photography might be silent, but once you have decided on your photographer, it's time to speak up. Have a dialogue and tell the photographer what is important to you. Kalas asks the couple to make a "wish list" of photographs they would like to see. Whether it's a picture of your grandmother, or one with you and mom, she makes sure to get those shots. Lawson says, "Forethought goes a long way, and the more you keep your photographer in the loop, either through your wedding planner, or directly, the better result you will have. So let the photographer know if you are planning to have bubbles, or lots of candlelight, or if you have called in a lighting designer to light the tent."

After the initial meeting and the deal is inked,

Photography by Tanya Lawson

Kalas will go survey the location of the wedding. And Cody often photographs the couple in what he calls an "engagement session," which is just a playful session (almost always done on location) where he captures the couple "engaging" with each other.

While Kalas does most of her wedding photography in the Hamptons, Cody shoots in many other locations and is planning to open a studio in Palm Beach. Lawson shoots all over the country and in Europe. In fact, she says, "I love doing European weddings, because they usually start at noon and the available light is just wonderful, and with photography it's all about the light. The less artificial light I have to use the better the result."

The most popular months for weddings on the East End, are from spring through September. Kalas says, "September is the most popular with June coming in second."

So whether you're picturing a wedding on the beach, at a nightclub, or at your family's home, make sure you keep the biggest picture in mind, and get the photographer in place — behind the camera.

—Janet Flora

women wear white, and the words say if you do, "you have chosen right." Like a funeral, if you wear red, "you will wish yourself dead." I'd imagine most parents would wish the same of their daughter or themselves if she chose this color and all it might signify. Colleen's parents are, after all, Catholic.

Good and bad omens are a whole other concern. This is something that is mostly within our control. For the good, all we have to do is invite a chimney sweep, borrow a black cat, and hope for sunshine and a rainbow. It is said that pigs and lizards crossing the path of those to be wed is a bad sign, but luckily we don't live in a third world nation, so I'm not concerned. Other bad omens are an open grave and coming into contact with a monk or a nun. The holy orders' appearance foretells barrenness, so ladies of Sienna, stay home in October, I mean September — cha-ching! We're not even sure we want kids, but leave us the option.

There's a lot to think about here, and it's just the beginning. With all the countries and religions, it never hurts to be safe and check all of their rules. Superstitions aside, there's still the harsh reality of parents and in-laws and money and time. Planning a wedding can crack even the most solid of foundations, but what matters most is life after the ceremony. For that, I have no doubts. It's said that whoever falls asleep first on your wedding night will be the first to die. I guess I'll take a Valium.

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

The weather outside is delightful and shop we must...So let's do it.

Starting out at Starbucks on Main Street in Bridgehampton for a great cup of java, I found out that they have introduced the fully programmable Starbucks Barista Digital Italia fully automatic home espresso machine. You can start your day with a half-caf nonfat latte for a morning pick-up to a grande cappuccino that will cap off a great evening meal. Available as of February 18, the special introductory price is $790 as opposed the regular price of $995. What a way to start your day!

Right across the street at Yaso's you will find an incredible collection of unique clothing vintage clothing and Italian imported clothing. There is a very unusual clothing line and I am sure you will leave this shop with your shopping tote full of lovely merchandise. Stop in and say hi to Colette, she will be glad to assist you.

Deja Vu Antiques and Collectibles on Main Street in Bridgehampton is packed to the rafters with good quality merchandise from the kitchen to the boudoir to the game room. Open year round, they buy, sell and consign. Stop in and check this one out.

A nice place to visit is Naturopathica Holistic Health Spa at the Red Horse Plaza on Montauk Highway in East Hampton to discover why their holistic treatments and products are featured at some of the leading resort and destination spas across the country. There is a Mind Body Studio for Yoga and Pilates, a Holistic Skin Care Treatment program and Massage Therapy just to make you feel better!

"Winter Sale", love that phrase...There is another one going on at English Country Antiques and Home Furnishings in Southampton, Bridgehampton and East Hampton. There is so much to choose from here, it takes hours to walk through and decide...Also, the luxury linens are 20% to 50% off.

Have you heard that Pacific East Restaurant on Main Street in Amagansett has announced it has inked a deal with DinnerBroker.com? This special service enables diners to make reservations online - even reserving tables during prime, "hard-to-get" dining hours. It's a free online reservation service that makes securing a reservation at the best restaurants a snap. Ah, life just gets easier and easier!

LVIS (Ladies Village Improvement Society) had their Gala Re-opening of the Bargain Box and Bargain Books. Located at 95 Main Street in East Hampton, look for what's new! Look for spring merchandise for women, men and children including designer clothes and shoes for women. There are even wedding dresses, tuxedos and formal wear and a brand new watch collection. How about furniture? Do you need sofas, hutches, household items and a grand selection of new books and more....Open from Tuesday through Saturday from 10 to 5 p.m. and there is plenty of parking in the adjacent lot. Have fun with this one!

Just to give you a heads up on Hildreth's Department Store's "Ugly Sofa" contest, you will be happy to hear that the contest has been extended until March 15. So, if you have an ugly sofa, you should take a photo and drop it off at any of Hildreth's locations and fill out the application form to enter. You just might win a brand new Klausner sofa in a beautiful denim fabric or have your old one recovered free. Now that's a deal and a half so boogie on down to Hildreth's and drop off your photo. The delivery is also free.

At Dansk also on Main Street in Southampton, look for a "buy one, get one" free with a bonus of 10% off of a $30 purchase or more. Love the Dansk Tjorn nickle plated bottle stoppers set of three for $24.95 and buy one, get one free too!

On North Main Street in Southampton, at Artistry In Flowers, there is 75% off Christmas and fall merchandise and 50% off everything in the shop. Don't miss out on this great sale, you can save plenty of bucks here.

At Blossom Haven Decorative Painting & Design where they specialize in historic murals, Erica-Lynn Huberty also does faux finishing, custom and historic stencils, furniture and walls and interior design. Give her a call at 725-4785.

At the foot of the bridge in Sag Harbor, walk on the wild side on the Long Wharf and step into Around Again for a seasonal clearance on men's and women's clothing and accessories. There are also daily surprise specials that could tickle your fancy here. Get going, the good stuff goes fast!

At The Sag Harbor Pharmacy on Main Street in Sag Harbor, where you can get a little bit of everything including great cards and gifts, don't forget to ask about the new flavored "Natural" flavored Blanx Toothpaste. I personally use this product and think it's the best toothpaste in the world. My preference is still the "Classic" but you have to make that decision yourself. I can't wait to tell my dentist about it!

For all kinds of alterations including custom made pillows, throws, etc. check out Nancy's Alterations on Glover Street in Sag Harbor. She does a beautiful job on everything and is the place to go for all your alterations and hand made. Call her at 631-725-3427 for information.

At The Magic Needle (love this shop) at 19 Main Street in Sayville, next to Relax The Back in Sayville there is a huge sale going on right now on all of their baby furniture and clothing, bath, bed and table linens, lingerie, towels, lamps, tables, furniture. Everything must be sold as it's an end of season clearance sale, so the sooner you get there the better, for best choices. This fabulous sale extends until March 15. Give a call at 631-218-8484.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

If you know of, or are having any sales and would like to share them with me, or have any questions regarding the shops or sales, please email me at shoptil@danspapers.com or fax me at: 631-537-3330. I'd love to hear from you...

Tattoo Debate

At least once a week I think about what kind of tattoo I will get one day. I do not think that there is a question of whether or not I will get a tattoo; it is more of a matter of when I will get it.

My brother Gabriel and my sister Maya both have two tattoos. My brother Gabriel, a sort of rocker type, has two tattoos located in pretty much the same spot on his forearm. The first tattoo is the word "elev" which I understand from him is a Romanian word that means "pupil." I think that he got this because part of our ethnic background is Romanian. The second tattoo that he has is a tattoo directly on his wrist, right above the "elev" tattoo that looks kind of like a belt buckle of some kind. It is kind of strange looking and I never really got the full story behind it. I guess I never really asked. Both of these tattoos, keep in mind, are relatively small and not really all that noticeable.

My sister, on the other hand, has one tremendously small tattoo and one tremendously large tattoo. The small tattoo is a tiny little rose, located right smack on her chest. The second tattoo, the super giant tattoo, is located on her thigh. She has a giant leopard. It stretches out for almost her entire thigh, and I have to admit, it is pretty cool.

Now that I am thinking about it, even my stepbrother Larry has a pretty cool looking tattoo on his forearm that reads the word "knowledge." That one is awesome.

So now, of course, I feel obligated to get one. I don't know why I feel this, but it is like I am out of the loop or something. For the past five years, I have been thinking about what type of tattoo I am going to get. I think that the first tattoo that I ever thought seriously about getting was one of those Chinese symbols that everyone was getting a couple of years back. Most of the time, the men got them on their shoulders or biceps, and the women would get them on the small of their backs. I really thought that I wanted to get one of these, but then I figured out that you have to choose the symbol by its meaning. This is kind of impossible. Maybe warrior, maybe love, maybe honor? Who can decide on something like that? I would end up getting ten.

On top of this decision, you have to make sure that the symbol that you are getting is not a phony. Some jerk tattoo artist might spell something out in Chinese that means "idiot," and all that thought will have been wasted. You would never know until you met somebody who could read Chinese, and even then they probably would not tell you. They would just laugh at you behind your back. Then I had the thought, comes the thought, why Chinese? Why not French? Do the Chinese get Chinese tattoos? At this point, it just became too much for me.

So I talked to Maya, my sister with the giant leopard on her leg, about it, and she told me that she would use the same leopard drawing that she has on her leg, but redraw it so that instead of a leopard, it looked like a lion, celebrating my ridiculously awesome middle name, Lion. If I did this, I think that people would start calling me Lion, which I kind of secretly wish people would do.

However, if it were on my leg, who would ever see it? It's not like I can walk around with my thigh showing in a mini skirt like Maya can. I would also have to constantly explain to people why I got the tattoo in the first place, which I guess is the point, but still, that might get annoying.

Then there is the whole fear of whether or not I would want something like that for the rest of my life. What if I got tired of it? Laser surgery? Who knows. Maybe I should invest in laser stock because down the line, kids like me who got their tattoos will probably want them removed. So maybe I shouldn't even get a tattoo in the first place and use the money instead to invest in some laser stock.

They should make a tattoo that you can turn on and off at the switch of a button or by shining a special light on it that will make it appear on your skin for a set amount of time.

Screw it, I'm getting one, it's decided. If I don't get it now, I'll be too old for one and then it will look dumb. But eventually, I am gonna get old and it will look dumb anyway. Now I am back to square one. Whatever. I'm all talk. I want to do it, but I think I am going to wimp out. Well, we'll see.

When In Manhattan...

Cinderella Dances in Manhattan

There are more than 3,000 versions of the Cinderella myth. Almost every world culture has one. Our heroine is known as "Yeh Shen" in China, "The Burnt Face Girl" to the Mik'maq tribe, "Tattercoats" in England, and "Marouckla" to the Slavs. The story doesn't credit a sole author, but it does have a few outstanding interpreters. Charles Perrault, a minor literary figure in 18th-century France, published Comtes de ma Mere L'Oye (Tales of Mother Goose) in 1697, which refashioned several folktales such as "The Sleeping Beauty," "Little Red Riding Hood," and "Cinderella." Perrault refined the well-known peasant version of the Cinderella tale for a more upscale audience. In the original, much darker version, the glass slipper was filled with blood from the severed toes and bunions of the wicked stepsisters. Mother Goose was translated into English in 1729, and the Brothers Grimm produced their famous German version in 1812. This classic story returns to Manhattan in the form of ballet at the New York Theater Ballet. The ballet toured the country to sold-out houses in 2003. Directed by Diana Byer, with choreography by Donald Mahler and music by Sergei Prokofiev, the ballet has brought the story to a new level in this hour-long production perfect for adults and children.

New York Theater Ballet has been all about children for years. Last week for the opening, NYTB hosted a gala ball featuring dance lessons for all ages with the unique opportunity to dance with the characters from the show. The ball celebrated NYTB's 25th anniversary and benefited their LIFT

Community Service Program. LIFT is a year-round dance study program for at-risk and shelter children that has exceeded the expectations put forth since its inception 15 years ago. Exemplifying LIFT's accomplishments is the 17-year-old Steven Melendez, who plays the handsome prince. Melendez is a Cinderella story all his own. He became a full company member this year from his humble beginnings 9 years ago when, at 8 years old, he stunned them in an audition and joined LIFT from a shelter in the Bronx as one of their 30 annual scholarship students. LIFT provides clothing, books, mentoring, and whatever else the needy children require. Diana Bryer had nothing but gushing words for this fine young dancer. "Steven is extraordinarily talented, a hard worker, and very brave," she said. Melendez was featured in The New York Times in December for his portrayal of the Nutcracker. If you follow this column, you may have seen him. He has received at least three full scholarships to some of the top ballet schools in the country, and currently attends the Professional Children's School for career kids of the performing arts.

Other show-stealing performances come from Justin Boccitto and Joey Stocks. With their comical dance steps and wild antics as the wicked stepsisters, you'll be transfixed and laughing. Danielle Guest, formerly of the Hartford Ballet, is Cinderella. Also look for a myriad of whimsical characters sure to delight, like Major Domo, the four-legged clock. Metropolitan Opera Costume Designer, Sylvia Taalsohn Nolan, designed the fantastic costumes inspired by the gorgeous illustrations from the book. Mobile sets were created by Gillian Bradshaw-Smith.

Cinderella runs its final weekend, March 6th and 7th, at Florence Gould Hall, 55 East 59th Street (between Madison and Park avenues). Performances begin: 11:00 a.m., 1:00 p.m. and 3:30 p.m. Ticket prices are $25 for adults and $20 for children 12 and under. Discounted tickets are available for groups 10 or more. Call the box office at 212-355-6160 or Ticketmaster at 212-307-4100.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Sweet Smell Of Dragon's Mouth

This is the second article in a series of four on endangered, native orchids. Look for the next articles on the fringe orchid (Blephariglossis) and beard flower (Pogonia).

How sad that gardeners rarely see one of the most beautiful native orchids that grows near streams, around ponds, and in the swampy areas on the East End. Dragon's Mouth (Arethusa bulbosa), one of the most beautiful flowers in North America, is nearly extinct. The beauty and uniqueness of this plant has led to poaching and the few populations on Long Island have been decimated or destroyed. Since the plants take years to mature, and have a unique approach to pollination, collecting the flowers from the wild is unwise and prohibited by law.

Arethusa bulbosa, aka Dragon's Mouth, look like the open jaws of a tiny dragon when the plant is in bloom. The botanical name comes from the river nymph of classical Greek mythology. The blooms rise from a small pseudo bulb that is loosely attached to the substrate materials found in wet areas. Like many native orchids, the plants like an acidic environment.

The plant produces one grass-like leaf, non-existent at the time the plant blooms. The leaf develops later in the growing season. Arethusa typically produces one flower per season – from 2 to 8 inches in size. The flower is bright magenta-to-pinkish white, complimented with pure white streaks, waves of yellow, and magenta or pink spots. Flowers appear any time from the end of May through the end of June.

One of the reasons Arethusa is so rare is that the plant offers no nectar to reward pollinators. The plant apparently deceives pollinators, which are inexperienced queen bumblebees, by supplying the cues of a nectar-rich plant without the rewards. Hence, the bees quickly learn to avoid the blooms because they offer little nourishment. Pollination is completely dependent on a supply of recently-emerged queen bumblebees. Obviously, this places constraints on the success of the plant. The plants are extremely difficult to propagate and few nurseries are willing to struggle with the multi-year effort needed to produce a blooming plant. However, some plants are available. One source is Woods End, located in Northfield, Wisconsin.

If you want to view an Arethusa in bloom, check sunny locations around swamps and ponds from the end of May through the month of June. Be careful not to tread too near the plants as disturbing the pseudo bulb may kill the plant. Never disturb the plant or try to gather plants from the wild.

If you have a swampy area or pond on your property, you may want to try to grow Arethusa by purchasing one or more plants from a nursery. To do so, the environment must be just right. Select a site in full sun that is adjacent to the pond or in the swamp where water will slowly seep into the hole once dug. Excavate a hole deep enough to accommodate a 3.8-cubic-foot bag of sphagnum peat moss on its side with about five inches extra on all sides (this allows the moss to swell up as the bag fills with water). Make holes on all but one side of the bag and place the bag in position. Fill in soil and pack it against the bag. Cut off the top of the bag and fill the bag with water. Let the bag sit overnight to fully saturate.

The next day, ensure the moss is wet. If the hole lacks adequate seepage to keep the moss wet, create a siphon using a piece of garden hose and insert from the pond into the bottom of the bag of moss to maintain the same level of water in the moss as in the pond.

Gently situate the plant in the moss and firm the moss around the roots. Water heavily once the plant is situated. Discontinue any disturbance of the plant, but ensure the moss is continually wet.

Fertilize the plant only after the plant has bloomed, and once the leaf has grown to about 2 inches. Use 1/4 strength of a fish emulsion or organic fertilizer.

While there is significant effort involved in growing Arethusa, we believe it is worthwhile to try to ensure this "most beautiful" of American plants survives.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

The Improvements At Southampton Hospital

One day back in the early 70s, I decided it was good idea to split firewood with a machete knife I found in the basement of the house I was renting in Montauk. Duh! Holding a piece of wood with my left hand, I came down with the right holding this monstrous knife. I sliced into my left thumb, cutting it clear to the bone. I was rushed by a friend to the clinic in East Hampton where the attending physician stitched it up. As a result my thumb to this day bends down but not up. It has never bothered me really. I look at it as one would an old battle scar. The care in those places was pretty limited back then. Let's just say that microsurgery was not an option. In Montauk, it was Doc Robbins or the clinic. They did their best.

Healthcare on the East End has come a long way. The hospital in Southampton that started out administering care to a small village and its farmers back in the 1900s is still the only one out east. But now, it serves the entire East End from Westhampton Beach to Montauk and has satellite facilities spread out through the Hamptons. Today, the hospital has some of the most sophisticated technology available in the areas of ultrasound, advanced radiology, microsurgery and joint replacement.

During the off season, the hospital is quiet and the emergency room, bombarded in summer, sees little activity. I remember visiting my sister-in-law in the maternity ward one November evening in 1992, and I could hear a pin drop in the hallway. I think she was the only one on that floor. I therefore was impressed to learn that this past year, there were 867 babies delivered, and that Southampton Hospital houses the only maternity facility on the East End.

In the summer, the hospital emergency room feels the weight. Not only has the base population grown tremendously, but the number of seasonal residents, visitors and summer workforce has too and the demand for health services has grown with it. "The emergency room sees approximately triple the number of patients in the summer months as other times," says Donna Sutton, Director of Public Affairs at Southampton Hospital, "bringing the hospital's traffic and workload to close to that of a New York City hospital." Last year, more than 26,000 people sought care in its emergency facility.

With statistics like these, it is no surprise that the hospital was in need of expansion. For many years, the facility could not keep up with the rap-

To compete, Southampton Hospital began a long-term renovation plan to increase their services and improve their technological equipment. They have recently undergone a million-dollar renovation to the Surgery Center, and have added a patient monitoring system. This new equipment has web-based, touch-screen technology that will monitor a patient's readings faster and more accurately, and allow doctors to view vital signs on their own computers in real time from any location. They can then quickly share this data with colleagues, via the internet. This feature could prove to be invaluable in summer, when travel to

Illuminations by Barbara Jo Howard

Getting To The Root Of The Problem

There is nothing more unattractive than hairline roots, whether they be a runway of dark hair surrounded by bleached locks or gray streaks sprouting like weeds. Let's face it; keeping up on color is a full-time job. It is a time consuming, non-gratifying expense that one is always trying to push back another week. Here are some tips to make the maintenance process easier, while keeping tell-all growth under control.

If you color your hair at a salon, book your next appointment as you pay for the current one. Make a date four weeks out, and go even if you think you don't really need it. You do. Though you can't see the crown of your head, everyone taller knows your true color.

If you don't have time or money to spend at a salon, there are plenty of great at-home kits that also deliver salon-like results if properly applied. But, it is next to impossible to do a good job by yourself, so ask a friend over to do the honors.

The trick of retouching, whether permanent color or rinse, is to divide and conquer. Use a comb to part the hair and then apply the color, using the comb to work the solution into the new growth. The key is not to cover the entire length of hair, but rather let the ends oxidize creating a more natural look, rather than a uniform overall shade. Forget what the box says about working the color throughout all your hair for the last ten minutes or so - don't. Just do the roots, making sure to apply extra solution to the tell-tale hairs around your ears and hairline. If your hair is really gray, leave the color on for an extra five minutes. Dispose of leftover solution, as it can't be used again.

Once you find your home color, buy four boxes to keep a supply on hand and never run below two boxes. There is nothing worse than hitting every CVS the night before a big event to search for your brand. Keep the box top in your wallet so you are sure to pick up the exact color by number, rather than by the model's face you think looks vaguely familiar.

Be sure to test first, and if anything goes awry, there is always a 1-800 number. In my experience (and there have been many), I have always gotten a knowledgeable and patient human being on the line, who has given me good advice on how to manage the disaster at hand. For example, there was the time I decided to dye my blonde highlights back to a "natural" light brown and turned my hair green. The advice was to literally "strip" it with a high detergent shampoo, like J&J's baby shampoo. It worked and the end result received quite a few complements.

If you do retouch at home, make a date with your "stylin'" friend to meet again in exactly one month's time. The good news about hair is that it grows. The bad news is that it shows.

Now, on to my self-inflicted bet to get fit. I went to Gurney's Inn where I am being pummeled into shape by Candice Monte, fitness director and her team of experts. This is Week Four in the Gurney's Inn Fitness and Nutrition Challenge and guess what? I am running, and not just to catch a bus. I am actually pounding out two miles a day and I have company. My dog. Granted, to the casual observer it looks as if he were pulling me along, but I am keeping up.

I hate to admit it, but I am feeling better even while I am exercising. It used to be that it only felt good when I stopped. I think Candice has hooked me on endorphins.

As reported in my last column, I now use a heart rate monitor to be sure I am working in my zone and then peaking above it, which is no problem when I run outside because any hill will spike up the heart rate. The workout is painless, and I really do feel better throughout the day. I would never have believed that I could do this. Candice has given me a renewed outlook.

Her tip for this week is warm-up before any workout, particularly with the cold weather. Whether working outside or inside, take the extra time to slowly heat up your muscles before any physical exercise. You can do this by walking and beginning to pick up speed or going up and down a set of steps. Also, do some gentle stretching after your warm-up. Reach to the sky, touch your toes, and you will be able to handle just about anything that comes your way.

Some Straight Talk About Your Looks

If you ever watch prime time news or read the most recent beauty magazines and wonder where you can get the latest cosmetic procedures done, you need look no farther than Dr. Alexander Covey at East End Laser Care. He has been providing cosmetic surgery procedures to the people of Long Island since 1988 and has been named "One of the Top Doctors in New York."

On March 23rd at 7 p.m. Dr Covey will be presenting a FREE SEMINAR on "The Newest Advances in Cosmetic Laser Surgery." Topics will include everything from the New Revolutionary Non-Surgical Facelift/Browlift, Thermage, to state of the art Laser Treatments for "lines and wrinkles, acne, and acne scarring, brown spots, facial veins, rosacea, and stretch marks." Learn how Botox, Collagen and the NEW FDA approved long-lasting wrinkle filler Restylane can eliminate facial lines and how Laser Hair Removal can permanently reduce unwanted hair.

You will also meet patients who have had remarkable results and find out how cosmetic laser surgery can help you look better and feel better. In short, this is your chance to find out more about what's new in cosmetic surgery.

For those who attend, there will be drawings for a FREE $500 Botox treatment and a FREE $150 Microdermabrasion treatment. Each person will also be given a jar of our own FREE Vitamin C beauty pads. All attendees for a limited time can take advantage of discounts on all cosmetic laser treatments.

Call (631) 878-9200 NOW to register. PRE-REGISTRATION IS NECESSARY (Last time many people had to be turned away). This seminar will take place at The Inn at East Wind at 5720 Route 25A in Wading River and will begin at 7 p.m. Refreshments will be served. East End Laser Care will donate a portion of all proceeds generated after this seminar to the Suffolk County Coalition Against Domestic Violence.

Unfortunately, as the reimbursement from insurers and the government continues to decline, the hospital struggles with the cost of providing care for the un-or under-insured. Since Southampton Hospital does not turn anyone away who needs help, it relies on private donations to sustain their costs. An annual fundraiser to benefit the hospital is now in its 45th year and has, over the past ten years, raised over ten million dollars.

There are other challenges facing the local healthcare industry in addition to the financial ones – mainly the marked cultural, social and economic contrasts in this community. I found out that the hospital recently established an Office of Cultural Diversity. This office creates programs designed to respond to the needs of the growing Latino population, as well as other minorities. They have increased the number of translators and bilingual employees, and now offer English as a second language program and have formed an anti-bias task force as an aid against racial discrimination.

In addition, they have opened satellite facilities in surrounding areas, such as The Shinnecock Indian Health Clinic on the reservation, the Center for Prenatal Care at Greenport, Pantigo Primary Care Center in East Hampton and the Center for HIV/AIDS Care in Southampton. All of these centers are staffed with physicians, nurses and social workers.

As the East End grows and changes, the local healthcare facilities are striving to keep pace, staying on the cutting edge of technology and addressing basic needs that may have been so far unmet. Next time I'm out East and decide to do something stupid with a knife, I'll head for the new microsurgery center in Southampton.

SUNNY DAYS AHEAD

Dear Dan,

It is quite a complement to have you select my portrait of the young girl for the cover of Dan's Papers.

I enjoyed your explanation as to when you decided to use it.

Luck would have it we had a beautiful weekend.

There have been many nice comments about the cover.

HIGH ASPIRATIONS

Dear Dan,

I just had to write to you after I read the article you wrote about the suggested height of a new building at the WTC site. Instead of making it 1776 feet height – why not 1492 (that was a good year too). I had to laugh because that's just what I thought also! (Two "great" minds with one thought!) Later on, I even thought of 1620, also!

I must say, too, that I enjoy Dan's Papers immensely and often wondered how you get the energy to write so many of the articles in each issue! Great job – and I'm sure you'll keep going – going – going – just like the Energizer Bunny!

Take Care.

ALOHA DAN

Dear Dan,

On behalf of the surfing community here in Long Island, New York, I would like to inform you of the upcoming Surfing Event in the name of the Late Rell Sunn who passed away in 1997 after a bout with cancer. The Annual Rell Sunn Surfing Contest will be held at Ditch Plains, Montauk on Saturday, July 17 and 18, 2004. There will be a Luau and related fund raising festivities on the night of the 17th at the nearby Montauk Downs Country Club facility.

At the peak of her career, at the age of 32, Rell was diagnosed with breast cancer. With no family history of the disease, Rell discovered that Native Hawaiian and Pacific Islander women have the highest incidence of breast cancer of all women in the United States.

When she realized that detection and prevention programs were seriously under-funded, Rell became a community educator and activist for breast cancer awareness and for the protection of the environment from the toxins she believed had caused her disease. Rell was also a board member of the Surfrider Foundation, an organization devoted to preserving the ocean environment, and served as Hawaii's surfing ambassador for more than 30 years.

The event is fully insured with the proceeds going to needy local area families to support their fight against cancer. Though we would like to see monetary donations we have a great platform, in the form of an organized raffle at our event dinner, that gives you an opportunity to market target products focused on an audience that may enjoy your products.

I am a Native of Hawaii, and have lived in Suffolk County for the past six years. I am a health physicist by trade and work at Brookhaven National Laboratory in the radiological control division. I lived in sixteen different cities across the Continental United States and Canada after leaving my home in Kaneohe, Hawaii some twenty-three years ago to pursue my career goals. We elected to settle here in Mastic Beach to be in touch with the ocean.

I have been a Waterman for over thirty-five years now and surf on a regular basis. I am the Manager of Woody's Surf Shop here in Shirley, and operate the business with my wife Carrie Jo and our three teenage girls; Tatianna Pi'ilani 12, Nikita Kaleiokalani 15 and Kristen Kanoelani 18.

I am now in the middle of the Rell Sunn Surfing Contest planning committee and responsible for seeking product and/or monetary donations from local and nationwide businesses that relates to our cause. I am also responsible for importing professional Hawaiian Entertainment and whatever else I can help with.

As we move along in the planning phase, I am constantly reminded that this event has great potential to get so many from the local community and abroad working under a common goal; Expression of "The Aloha Spirit!"

I am writing today to solicit your assistance regarding the event and to help us preserve and perpetuate the sport of surfing here in Eastern Long Island.

Any kind of donation would help as we hope to assist those who need support for the fight against cancer.

Thank you for your time concerning this matter. Your cooperation is greatly appreciated.

FOUR LEGGED FRIENDS

Dear Dan,

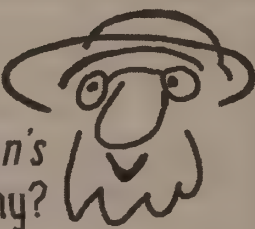

It's been fourteen years since I lived in Southampton (briefly, in Hampton Bays). I've visited many times but I long for the opportunity to live there again.

Anyway, I read an article in Newsday about the Southampton Animal Shelter and I wanted to know exactly where it is as my daughter (who was born in Southampton Hospital in '89) is a huge lover of dogs and would like to volunteer there perhaps one Saturday or Sunday a month (we live in Queens now). Thank you.
